Hanoi Runs Risk Of New War—U.S.

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — North Vietnam must halt its aggression in Cambodia and Laos, or run the risk of precipitating a new war, both Saigon and Washington have warned Hanoi.

President Nixon, in his annual state of the world message Thursday to Congress, said unless North Vietnam lives up to the ceasefire agreement, it risks renewed war with the U.S.

His words were echoed in South Vietnam today, where a Saigon government spokesman said "if the Communists try to violate and endanger our two neighboring countries, the Republic of Vietnam will have to reconsider her policy toward implementation of the ceasefire."

Nixon also indicated the chances of improved United States relations with the Soviet Union and China are threatened by what he describes as continued aggression by North Vietnam.

He indicated American tolerance has been tested to the breaking point and Hanoi now has two choices.

"The first is to exploit the Vietnam agreement and press its objectives in Indochina. In this case it would continue to infiltrate men and material into South Vietnam, keep its forces in Laos and Cambodia and through pressure or outright attack renew its aggression against our friends."

By picking this path, Nixon stated, Hanoi "would endanger the hard-won gains for peace in Indochina. It would risk revived confrontation with us."

This was the plainest language Nixon has used in dealing with North Vietnam since the war was supposed to have ended more than three months ago.

Nixon said Hanoi still can retrieve the situation.

"The second course is for North Vietnam to pursue its objectives peacefully," he said. This would mean total observance of the Vietnam agreement, including full accounting of missing American servicemen and a removal of all North Vietnamese troops from Laos and Cambodia.

"If North Vietnam chooses the peaceful option, the United Stafes remains committed to better relations," Nixon said. This includes the U.S. economic aid he said is essential to a lasting peace.

Meanwhile, in Saigon, Viet Cong and South Vietnamese government representatives were meeting today to try and break the deadlock on safety guarantees for ceasefire supervisors which has held up the exchange of civilian prisoners.

The two sides were understood to be looking at new procedures proposed by the Polish delegation of the International Commission of Control and Supervision which would allow the civilian releases to go ahead.

At the same time, Canada urged the ICCS to condemn the Viet Cong for a formal violation of the Vietnam truce agreement if they refuse to grant wider air corridors for observer helicopters.

The four-country commission was divided on the request, however, a Canadian spokesman said.

Apparently the Indonesian delegates are non-committal, while the Hungarians and Poles oppose such a move.

The Canadians argue that under the Paris peace agreement, freedom of movement is guaranteed.

Land Group Formed

Resources Minister Robert Williams today announced the establishment of what he termed a "small secretariat" to assist the provincial government's environment and land-use committee in all land-use, regional development and resource management decisions.

He said the secretariat will have a total staff of some 83 personnel, of whom 22 will be new appointments, and the budget for the new staff is expected to total about $400,000. The agency will be headed by a director equivalent in status and salary (about $27,000) to a deputy minister, "indicating the importance with which the government views the job of secretariat."

Advertising for key positions is expected to begin soon, and initial staffing completed this summer.

The secretariat's prime role, as explained in a lengthy press release from Williams' department, is apparently one of liaison and co-ordination, both internally between the various government departments and externally in working closely with regional districts.

The group will assist and be directly responsible to the environment and land-use committee in its role of "co-ordinating major regional development decisions on an inter-departmental basis and with the regional districts throughout the province," Williams' statement said. It will also work in conjunction with the soon-to-be-established land commission.

The cabinet committee, responsible for broad environmental and land-use policy, was established under the former Social Credit administration by an act which overrides other development and environment management legislation. It is chaired by Williams, with membership consisting of the ministers of agriculture, municipal affairs, health services, mines and highways.

"Our resources are too valuable to leave to a piecemeal process, and the experience and insight of municipalities and regional districts are too valuable to leave in their present frustration," Williams said.

Initially it will be composed of three technical groups, an inventory group, a regional planning group and a so-called "special projects" group.

The inventory group will ab-

OTTAWA OFFERS CLEAN-UP FUND

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal government is willing to make available up to $20 million a year for 10 years to improve the quality of water in Georgia Strait and all tributary waters such as the Fraser River, Environment Minister Jack Davis said Thursday in an interview.

He said the money would be in the form of loans, through the provincial government, to municipalities, subject to a 25 per cent "forgiveness" clause.

Davis chided the provincial government for not availing itself of the money.

He also said that large shipments of environmentally hazardous substances eventually will be banned from the inside passage along the British Columbia coast.

He made the remark in an interview during a flying tour of Johnstone Strait islands that were smeared with bunker fuel when the freighter Irish Stardust grounded near here last winter.

Davis, who viewed the region for the first time since the incident Jan. 25, also said the government will banish vessels that exceed an as yet unspecified maximum size, irrespective of the cargo being carried.

A PERSONAL TIRADE was launched against top brass in the Republican Party and White House Thursday by Martha Mitchell when she testified in a civil suit arising out of the Watergate bugging. According to sources at the hearing, her testimony —despite earlier claims that she knew of "dirty business"—shed little new light on the case.

50% Think Nixon Liar

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Half the U.S. people believe President Nixon lied when he said on television Monday he had no knowledge of a coverup of the Watergate political espionage plot, says a Gallup Poll issued today.

Four out of 10 people interviewed in the poll also said they thought Nixon had advance knowledge of the plot.

To the question, "Do you think President Nixon has participated in a coverup of the Watergate situation?" 50 per cent of those interviewed said "yes" and 35 per cent said "no," with 15 per cent undecided.

In his speech, Nixon accepted ultimate responsibility for the plot but denied he knew anything about it.

Asked by the Gallup Poll whether they thought Nixon told the whole truth in his speech, 30 per cent said "yes" and 40 per cent said "no."

U.S. attorney general-designate Elliot Richardson, under heavy pressure from Congress, has indicated he probably will name a special independent prosecutor in the Watergate case, according to sources.

The Washington Post said today that Richardson's decision was definite, but other sources didn't go that far. They said he will make no public commitment until his nomination as attorney general is confirmed by the senate.

President Nixon, meanwhile, picked Gen. Alexander Haig today to serve as temporary chief of the White House staff while senate investigators questioned Nixon's former two top aides about the case and any cover-up of it.

Word of the president's choice of Haig, army vice-chief of staff, for the critical post came from Florida, where Nixon is spending the weekend, while H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman were submitting to a second day of testimony before separate investigators.

The two said today they were sure any suspicions of any presidential knowledge of the Watergate affair would be dispelled "when the truth is fully known."

White House sources said the 49-year-old Haig would serve on an interim basis, taking over many of the duties that Haldeman held until he resigned Monday as chief of staff.

However, Nixon does not intend to give anyone the broad powers that Haldeman wielded, sources said.

Haig was Nixon's No. 2 national security adviser until January, when he was given a promotion from two-star to four-star general by the president.

He will return to his military job after helping the president rebuild the riddled top level of the White House staff.

Haig has been one of Nixon's favorite troubleshooters. He frenquently undertook missions for the president to assess the military and political situation in Indochina.

In selecting Haig as staff chief, Nixon followed the example of President Eisenhower, who also picked an army man to head the White House staff in the wake of the resignation of Sherman Adams who was implicated in a vicuna coat scandal.

Ehrlichman and Haldeman testified for a total of seven hours before the Watergate

Nixon Includes Canada

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon has linked Canada with transatlantic opportunities this year to produce a healthy world economy and peaceful society.

While placing emphasis on Europe in his world policy review Thursday, Nixon opened his arms in a wider embrace by saying:

"The United States, Canada and Western Europe have a decisive contribution to make to a healthy world economy and to a new peaceful international order. These are new creative tasks for our partnership."

Reviewing post-war developments among alliance members, the president dwelt briefly on the "challenges" offered as both Canada and the U.S. redefined their world position. (See also Page 10.)

"Frank reappraisals of our respective interests have brought some new problems to the fore, particularly in economic relations between the two countries," he said.

U.S. JET CRASHES INTO HOSPITAL

PHNOM PENH (AP) — A United States A-7 Corsair plane attempting an emergency landing at Phnom Penh's Pochentong Airport overshot the runway and crashed into a Cambodian army hospital today causing an unknown number of casualties.

Witnesses at the scene said there might be as many as 30 dead and injured.

The pilot ejected seconds before the impact and suffered minor injuries, a U.S. embassy spokesman reported.

The spokesman said the aircraft crashed as a result of mechanical difficulties and was unable to say whether it had been hit by gunfire.

Lebanon Lull In Third Truce

BEIRUT (AP) — Two days of bitter fighting between the Lebanese army and Palestine Arab guerrillas ended today with both sides holding to a new ceasefire.

Two ceasefire attempts Thursday collapsed and open street battles threatened to sweep Lebanon into full-scale civil war.

Only a few random shots were heard in the streets of this shell-torn capital today.

In southeast Lebanon, 5,000 troops of the Palestine Liberation Army were reported to have crossed the border from Syria but then withdrew to positions on the border after truce was agreed.

A defence ministry spokesman said army forces in Beirut have "withdrawn to assembling areas in compliance with the ceasefire agreement and we hope the other side will do the same."

Guerrilla jeeps with loudspeakers toured bullet-riddled Palestinian sectors of the city urging combatants to observe the ceasefire.

Beirut's international airport was reopened and commercial flights were resumed after a 12-hour closure. Traffic between Beirut and Damascus also resumed.

Premier Amin Fafez told reporters: "All signs show that conditions today are better than yesterday. Both sides are making efforts to apply the provisions of the ceasefire. Reactions of all other Arab countries were excellent."

The Kuwaiti ambassador announced that a shipment of blood plasma and medical supplies was on its way from his country.

Radio broadcasts from Cairo and Damascus, Syria's capital, carried Moslem prayers for the Sabbath urging Arabs to "spare your blood for the real holy war against the Israeli infidels who are polluting sacred Jerusalem and usurping our lands."

Drug Addiction On Increase

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — UN members reported Thursday that general drug addiction is increasing around the world, even in poor countries, but that heroin use in the United States has declined for the first time in nine years.

France also reported a fall in heroin use, but said the use of marijuana and LSD was increasing.

"In the United States," said American spokesman Harvey R. Wellman, "the rate of new addiction to heroin has registered its first decline since 1964."

He attributed this to tougher measures taken by law enforcement agencies in combatting the drug traffic, steep increases in drug seizures and to expanded treatment of addicts.

But as the social committee of the UN economic and social council opened its discussion on narcotic drugs, a report showed growing use of drugs throughout the world. The report, by the International Narcotics Control Board, said the scope of drug abuse widened and became more complex in 1972.

"The most disturbing effect," the report said, "has been the increasing resort to heroin, not only in the urban areas of industrialized countries, but also in developing countries, where it infects the younger members of the population."

However, the board reported progress in international co-operation to combat drug dealing, especially in the main production areas in The Middle East, South and Southeast Asia.

PRINCE RUPERT SUPERPORT?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Environment Canada has recommended a site near Prince Rupert for a superport development.

Two reports, one by a private Vancouver firm, and the other by the northern branch of the fisheries service, both made for Environment Canada, were released today.

Both conclude that Ridley Island, about four miles south of Prince Rupert, would be suitable.

Mourners at the bier of a girl they didn't know

A Dozen Strangers . . . But They Cared

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mourned by only a handful of strangers, a murdered teenage girl went to her grave Thursday with her identity still a mystery and her slayer still at large.

In her namelessness, she was mourned simply as a human being deserving of love and sympathy.

"Everyone should have flowers," said a handwritten note on a bouquet placed on her grey coffin.

The body of the girl, about 16, was discovered March 21 in undergrowth in Stanley Park by a man searching for beer bottles. Her skull had been smashed, possibly by a 25-pound rock that was lying on the chest.

Beneath the badly-decomposed body was a newspaper dated May, 1972, leading police to believe it had lain in the park for almost a year.

Rev. Olli Jokasaari began his service with the 139th psalm— "O Lord, thou hast searched me, and know me."

It was a death of puzzling questions, he said.

"Who was she? Where was she from? Why did this thing happen? The answers were not known but "she was one of us . . . and as such deserves our love and our deepest sympathy.

The dozen mourners attending the funeral chapel service — 10 women and two men — were of an age to have a teenaged daughter of their own.

Eight of the mourners travelled in the funeral procession to the grave, which like the service, was paid for by the city.

Funeral parlor staff, reporters and photographers made up the remainder of the procession.

Police said as complete a description of the girl as possible has been circulated to police throughout Canada and the United States and a chart of dental work has been distributed to dentists across Canada.

The only response was from a couple in Red Deer, Alta., whose daughter was missing. They were unable to identify the body.

Police believe the possibility of the girl ever being identified is remote. The marker on her grave will bear a two-word inscription: Unknown Female.

MoT DENIES CHARGE

Top ministry of transport officials today denied accusations that inadequate rescue facilities led to the drowning of two people in Tofino harbor.

Doug Arnett, area director of the Pacific Trollers' Association, has blamed the drownings on a change of policy in manning the lifeboat station.

Instead of having a man on telephone watch during standby hours, the alarm is now signalled by the Tofino marine radio station, who contact the lifeboat coxswain on duty.

"If there had been a man on duty at the station he could have got to the people in a couple of minutes," said Arnett.

ONE-MILE TRIP

Martha Martin, 73, and David Henry Williams, 33, drowned when their 12-foot dugout canoe capsized at 2 a.m. Wednesday as they were setting out on the one-mile trip to the Opitsate Indian Reserve.

Williams' wife, Linda, 30, was pulled from the water by a person on the wharf, and his father, Henry, 63, was rescued by a member of the lifeboat crew, John Shaw, within four minutes of receiving the alarm.

Herbert Buchanan, transport regional director in Vancouver, and Capt. Charles Barber, rescue officer based in Kitsilano, denied Arnett's charge.

MORE EFFICIENT

They say that the switch from telephone to radio watch was done for efficiency, not economy as Arnett claims.

Buchanan said, "If you could guarantee that all accidents would happen in front of the station it would be so. But you can't."

Barber asked, "What happens if the lifeboat is already out and another call comes in if there's only a telephone watch? With the radio we have contact with the boat at all times."

Buchanan said Ottawa had ordered a preliminary investigation of the incident.

"We will investigate whether the craft was seaworthy, whether common sense was used by those in it, whether the necessary lifesaving equipment was on board, weight factors and other details."

He added, "The important thing to remember is that one of the crew, a Mr. Arnott, heard the people and gave the alert. He used his head and phoned Shaw, who lives near the wharf, before contacting marine radio.

"Shaw was out and had rescued a man in four minutes, using a rubber dinghy, and the lifeboat was out searching within 15 minutes."

Barber said the Tofino lifeboat crew is "pretty sore" about the criticism.

"It seems that when anything goes wrong," he said, "when someone dies, gets wounded or anything else the people involved never say maybe I made a mistake. Instead, they blame the government, the hospital or the police."

The Million-Dollar Campaign Mystery

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The former treasurer of President Nixon's campaign finance committee testified in a sworn deposition that the campaign raised more than $1 million in cash contributions which apparently were never reported.

The statement made last October by Hugh Sloan was revealed by United States District Court today.

Lawyers for Common Cause, a citizens group, asked Sloan how much cash money was covered in a missing ledger sheet of cash transactions by the committee.

A. I don't have a precise figure in mind. But it was in excess of $1 million.

Q. You have indicated that the amount was in excess of $1 million. Can you put a ceiling on it? Was it under $10 million?

A. Oh, yes, it was under $2 million.

Q. Somewhere between $1 million and $2 million?

A. Yes.

Later in the deposition Sloan said the missing sheets listed "about $900,000" in disbursements.

Sloan testified that some records of the cash transactions had been destroyed. He was asked, "what kind of information would be found on the missing, or destroyed documents?"

"The summary sheet of all contributions received in cash as opposed to by cheque or securities, and the disbursements made from these funds," Sloan said.

Meanwhile the General Accounting Office Thursday accused President Nixon's re-election committee on an "apparent violation" of federal law in publishing a newspaper ad that purported to show citizens' support for the president's decision to mine Haiphong harbor last May.

The GAO report was the fifth since last August charging the Committee for the Re-Election of the President with apparent violations of campaign finance or other federal laws. The report was referred to the justice department for possible prosecution.

The ad, which appeared in the New York Times last May 17, criticized a May 10 Times' editorial opposing the Haiphong mining. It was headed The People vs. The New York Times and was signed by 14 persons.

Nowhere was the re-election committee mentioned in the ad, which the GAO cited as an apparent violation of the law.

In New York, a federal court Thursday issued a warrant for the arrest of Robert Vesco, a New Jersey financier accused of making a secret $200,000 cash contribution to Nixon's re-election campaign.

The warrant was signed by Judge Edmund Almieri after Vesco ignored a subpoena to testify before the grand jury investigating the campaign gift, made after the securities and exchange commission named Vesco in a $224 million civil fraud suit.

The suit charged Vesco and 41 others had looted Investors Overseas Services Ltd., a Swiss company of which Vesco was board chairman.

Meawhile, a California newspaper says today that President Nixon's personal medical records were taken out of a safe and "obviously scrutinized" in the Long Beach office of his personal phycision during a burglary at the height of the 1972 presidential campaign.

In a copyright story, the paper says Dr. John Lugren, the president's personal physician before he entered the White House and now his "medical consultant," said the Nixon records were removed from a special safe and scattered on the office floor.

Dr. Lungren's office was burgled the first time in early September and then again two weeks later, the newspaper says, with the same method used both times.

In the second robbery the Nixon medical records had been obviously disturbed, although nothing else, including money plainly visible, was taken.

"The papers were out of their chronological order and obviously scrutinized," the doctor said.

"There is the supposition that they might have been photographed."

In another development, former White House aide Murray Chotiner acknowledged Thursdy that he interceded with key presidential assistants to free former Teamsters Union leader James Hoffa from prison.

"I did it. I make no apaolgies for it, and frankly I'm proud of it," said Chotiner, how in private law practice.

He told a reporter that among those in the White House with whom he discussed Hoffa's case was H. R. Haldeman, who this week resigned as President Nixon's staff chief following disclosures in the Watergate bugging scandal.

Retired Engineer To Head Board

Arthur Saunders, a retired engineer, has been elected president of the public society which operates Victoria General Hospital.

A special meeting of the Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society board Thursday night elected Saunders both president of the society and chairman of the 13-member board.

He replaces Dr. A. J. Wood, who stepped down at the annual meeting a week ago after heading the society for its first five years.

Elected vice-chairman of the board is Oak Bay Ald. Doug Watts. Both Saunders and Watts are in their second year on the board.

Treasurer is Douglas Boyde, a retired bank manager.

Three new board members, lawyer Alan Paterson, teacher Hugh Gordon and UVic professor Michael Ashwood-Smith, were elected at the annual meeting.

Other board members are Saanich Ald. Edith Gunning, Larry Ryan, secretary-treasurer of the Victoria Labor Council; Sister Mary Luca of the Sisters of St. Ann, who founded the former St. Joseph's Hospital 97 years ago; Mrs. Sally Rogers, Kenneth McRae, Tom Shorthouse and Dr. James Duxbury, president of the hospital's medical staff.

JOB FREEZE DENIED

An armed forces spokesman said today the defence department has no national policy of contracting out work normally done by defence department janitors and food-handlers.

After attending a meeting of the Union of National Defence Employees in the Esquimalt Legion hall Thursday night, Allan McKinnon has promised the question of contracting out work will be raised in the Commons Monday.

At the meeting, some of the 250 present expressed concern that some 234 workers at CFB Esquimalt could be affected if their jobs were contracted out.

The spokesman said today that a statement from Ottawa stated that neither the Treasury Board or the defence department had any intention of putting a "freeze" on janitor vacancies.

It did say, however, "Some bases may have decided not to fill certain vacancies, having regard to local priorities Capt. G. B. Hayes, base comwould investigate the situation locally.

Blacks Beat Up Whites

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Roving bands of black youths dragged white motorists from their cars and beat them in the streets of South Jamaica, a suburb, after an evening of looting, mugging and arson.

The outburst in the black ghetto was touched off by the shooting Saturday of a 10-year-old boy, Clifford Glover, by a policeman trying to question him about a robbery.

The boy, the youngest person ever killed by a New York City policeman, was buried Thursday. Gangs of black youths marched from the funeral to a protest rally at a police station Thursday and then began throwing bricks and bottles along Jamaica Avenue, the borderline with a white neighborhood.

As the evening wore on they broke into a liquor store, started at least one fire and then began assaulting motorists.

One black youth said a bus had been chartered to take a group of demonstrators to the suburban home of Patrolman Thomas Shea, who shot and killed the boy. The house is under police guard.

An informed White House source said that the new guidelines are designed to facilitate the examination of White House aides questioned by the grand jury, the FBI or the senate select committee.

They state that "the president desires that the invocation of executive privilege (the right not to answer certain questions) be held to a minimum."

Both Ehrlichman and Haldeman declined to discuss their testimony with reporters as they left the courthouse. Both said that they had not invoked the fifth amendment in response to any question.

In addition, Haldeman said that he had not invoked executive privilege and had answered all questions.

$6,000 DAMAGE IN HIGHWAY CRASH

A three-car collision on the Pat Bay Highway early today caused $6,000 damage after the driver of a pickup truck swerved to miss a dog.

A Central Saanich police spokesman said Steven Lennon, 1261 Stancil, driver of the pickup, was going north on Pat Bay near Tanner Road at 9 a.m.

As he swerved to avoid the dog he crossed the highway and collided with a station wagon, driven by Jack Morrison, of New Westminster, and a car driven by George Jendrossek of Sidney.

The other two vehicles were travelling south.

There were no injuries.

ZOOLOGIST FINDS NEW PAIN KILLER

TORONTO (CP) — A method of effectively killing pain may have been discovered by a University of Toronto scientist.

Dr. Bruce Pomeranz says he has found a chemical in the human body that he believes transmits pain signals to the brain.

By using a synthetic chemical, he says he has been able to block pain signals in experimental animals.

The synthetic is "as cheap as aspirin." But he declines to disclose what it is until he is sure it is effective and can take out a patent.

Dr. Pomeranz, a professor of zoology who also is a physician and psychiatrist, suggests his discovery could lead to an effective means of ending pain in such diseases as cancer and arthritis.

Barbie says . . .

"NEVER JUDGE THE JAM BY THE LABEL ON THE JAR"

There's an old saying often used by my mother which goes like this, "Never judge the jam by the label on the jar."

This sort of reasoning can be applied to many things. For instance, never judge a home by what you see as you approach the front door. How right this proved to be when we were invited to a house party at Croston's home.

They live in a nice locality, a small house built about twenty years ago. We were met at the front door by Joan Croston, who, after directing Joe where to hang his top coat, escorted me into, what one would call, the master bedroom.

You know, the old custom of piling all the visitors' coats on the bed . . . but when I entered the bedroom I was pleasantly surprised! I was unable to resist saying, "What a beautiful room." Joan, our hostess, modestly replied, "Yes, we like it, too." The bedroom was most beautifully and tastefully furnished. The whole effect was one of restfulness. "Did you bring all your furniture with you?" I asked. They had moved from Montreal about a year ago.

"Oh, no!" replied Joan. "We sold all our goods before moving to Victoria, and bought everything new from MACDONALD'S FURNITURE MART, at the CORNER OF BROAD AND PANDORA."

This surprised me even more, for the three-piece bedroom suite was of the style and class one sees on show in the Montreal or Toronto stores. The dressing table looked about six feet long with nine drawers and a large, framed, single mirror. The linen chest had five large drawers with lots of room to store linen and other items.

The queen-sized bed had a beautifully carved headboard and the whole suite was handsomely carved in Spanish styling.

The drapes and bedspread were multi-colored and the cosy wall-to-wall carpet was the shag type in beige. The lamps matched everything.

"Did you say that you got everything at MACDONALD'S?" I asked.

"Oh, yes," replied Joan. "Their man came up and we spent a couple of hours planning the whole scheme."

That did it! I, there and then, resolved to visit 1420 BROAD STREET. Joe had promised to repaint our bedroom and now I had decided that we, too, would have a new bedroom suite from MACDONALD FURNITURE MART.

Ellsberg Team Will Sit It Out

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The defence refused to take any further active part in the Pentagon Papers trial today until the judge rules on a motion to dimiss all charges on grounds of governmental misconduct.

Defendants Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo remained in their places in the courtroom but attorney Leonard Boudin said the defence would not cross-examine any further prosecution witnesses or raise legal objections.

U.S. District Court Judge Matt Byrne called the jury back into the courtroom and ordered the trial to proceed despite the defence demands.

"I have directed my counsel to ask no questions and examine no witnesses as long as this farce about national defence continues," Ellsberg told the judge.

Byrne made it clear that he did not intend to rule on a motion for dismissal or a mistrial until he had further information about the burglary of the office of Ellsberg's psychiatrist by Howard Hunt and Gordon Liddy.

A 28-page chronological profile of Ellsberg from his birth to last November which was found in Hunt's White House office was turned over to the court at the morning session by prosecutor David Nissen.

Nissen said the government was also receiving by telephoto tranmission the transcript of the testimony of Hunt before the Watergate grand jury hearing in Washington which was ordered made available to the Bryne's court by U.S. district court Judge John Sirica.

Byrne said he would attempt to read all pertinent information during the noon recess and perhaps at that time decide on when to hear the motion for dismissal.

Boudin said it was "farcical" to continue with prosecution government witnesses until the court resolved "a completely different and far more important case the case of misbehavior by the United States government.

"We would never accept the world of a Liddy or of a Hunt as to what files they may or may not have destroyed," Boudin said.

Byrne has warned the prosecution he will dismiss the espionage-conspiracy-theft charges against Ellsberg and Russo, or declare a mistrial, if any of the evidence used by the government was obtained illegally.

Further, Byrne has warned Nissen that it is the "burden of the government" to dispel any doubts about use of such "tainted" evidence.

It has yet to be shown, however, that the information gathered in the burglary, if any, was known to justice department attorneys preparing the case.

Little Stations Backed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A group of senators asked President Nixon today to force gasoline refineries to supply all their old customers in case a gas shortage put 40,000 independent stations out of business to the detriment of competition.

Under an amendment to the Economic Stabilization Act opposed by the administration and the oil industry but signed into law by Nixon Monday night — the president has power to require major refiners to allocate gasoline, crude oil and petroleum products among all their former customers.

Sen. Philip Hart, chairman of the Senate antitrust subcommittee, said independent stations, which sell about a fifth of all gasoline, are being forced out of business every day by the shortage of gasoline.

He sought co-signers among his colleagues for a letter which is to go to Nixon Monday. So far, 14 have signed it.

"The extent to which they are being crippled is even now evident in the rapidly rising prices," the letter said. "If the recent shortages are allowed to eliminate these businessmen, not only will management and employees from 4,000 stations be thrown out of work but the gasoline market will be dominated by only a handful of major integrated oil companies."

Diplomatic Deadbeats

UNITED NATIONS (Reuter) — A number of United Nations missions and "more than a dozen individual diplomats" are in danger of having their telephones cut off because of unpaid bills, the United States told the UN committee on host country relations Thursday.

William E. Schaufele, of the U.S. mission, also said nearly 8,000 parking tickets were issued to foreign diplomats in the last 26 months.

Listing a series of abuses of diplomatic privilege, he said many UN delegates had left New York "leaving a string of unpaid bills, unpaid loans, unpaid credit-card accounts and unpaid medical bills."

"I am not exaggerating when I say, frankly, that the situation is most serious and cannot continue," Schaufele said.

Schaufele catalogued the abuses by the diplomatic community in New York after the 15-member committee had heard charges that the United States does not do enough to protect missions from harassment.

Saanich Building Takes Upswing

. . . and city pace a close second

Victoria and Saanich construction development led Greater Victoria municipalities during April when $7.58 million worth of building permits were issued in the capital region.

Saanich led all in dollar value with $3.68 million, just ahead of Victoria's $3.66 million, and both municipalities now register more than $10 million each in new permits since Jan. 1.

Oak Bay was at the bottom of the scale with a mere $25,438 total compared with just over $1 million in April last year.

Esquimalt dropped to $210,200 for 13 permits from $376,265 for 12 permits.

In Victoria the 19 permits for new buildings included a 60-suite apartment on Croft in James Bay. The grand total including general work and renovations totalled 439.

New residential units total 187 including five apartment buildings, one duplex and five houses.

The figures compare well with those for the past six years.

Saanich values for April rose four times the total of a year ago in contrast to a downtrend during February and March.

Four of the projects for which permits were issued last month were worth one-third million dollars or more including one for $1.22 million, giving a total worth $3.68 million. A year ago April accounted for only $916,000.

There were 117 permits granted, up 26, of which 34 worth $1.3 million were for residences. Dwellings last year accounted for 46 permits valued at $837,400.

Since the beginning of 1973 there have been 371 permits totalling $10.74 million, compared with 400 permits valued at $9.76 million in April 1972.

Dwelling starts for the year are down to 142 from 161 at April 30, 1972.

The large projects started last month will provide 46 townhouse units and a 128-suite apartment and put $368,500 worth of renovations into Veterans' Hospital.

Minor repairs and remodelling jobs accounted for 36 permits being issued by Oak Bay in April compared to April 1972 when 44 permits were issued.

Total permits and their value for this year to the end of April are 114 for $222,396. In 1972 123 permits were issued, the value of the work amounting to $3.4 million.

". . . there's one sure sign Spring has come to Victoria . . .!"

Protection Still Needed

It is almost two years since the provincial director of pollution control, Mr. William Venables, rejected an application by Jordan River mining interests to discharge mining waste into the sea near the West Coast centre. Up to one million gallons a day of mixed water and mud was to be poured into the ocean. Mr. Venables' action, however, was over-ruled by the provincial Pollution Control Branch, and discharge of the slurry has been permitted, but with certain restrictions.

These included provision of a holding pond for use in case of emergency, discharge of all material into 40 feet depth of water and 1500 feet from shore, regular inspection of the outfall for toxic substances, and so on. The public, aroused by the environmental threat at Jordan River, rested content that a workable compromise had been achieved, and that the sea and shore would be adequately protected.

Now it appears that a break in the outfall pipe has been discharging material on the beach, and that in addition the present company is applying to have the original restrictions amended so that coarse materials may be dumped at a depth of only ten feet below the low water line, while the fine materials will continue to be discharged at a depth of 40 feet.

It is argued that no toxic material is present in the slurry, but that aspect is only one among several involved. One concern of environmentalists two years ago was that the clouded waters resulting from the discharge would alter the sunlight conditions on the sea floor, hence the vegetation, and hence the normal food supply for fish and other marine life. There are, too, the effects that must result from material washed back on shore. If the company is having difficulties in living up to the regulations imposed, that is the company's problem. The present situation includes important concessions to the company's interests, for the original decision was to prohibit any discharge at all.

The time has passed when industrial concerns can leave out of the cost of operations such items as destruction or alteration of the environment. If what is being done is not worth the effects that are being suffered, then methods should be changed so that the total of industrial and social costs is not more than the return of the industry. The Jordan River environmental problem appeared to have been reasonably settled. The pipe should be repaired and the protective terms enforced two years ago should be retained.

Change in the Youth Trend

A Christian Science Monitor survey supports the concept that American youth has changed direction in recent months, returning, with the swing of the pendulum, to a more realistic approach to the affairs of the world and of themselves. Youths are paying more attention to personal appearance — shorter, though not short, hair for males, skirts rather than jeans for young women. They are working harder and they are demonstrating less.

The end of the draft and large American participation in Vietnam fighting, the achievement of some civil rights goals and an apparently renewed desire to seek acceptable paths to the pursuit of happiness have reduced militancy. They're looking for jobs and finding them harder to come by. Educationally, they seem to be turning to courses in practical science with hopes of finding well-paying employment rather than to the humanities and political science.

What some have called "the Children's Crusade," intent on changing the erring world to one of perfection overnight, is ended. Some of the idealism has faded and a certain disengagement arising from cynicism has occurred in politics.

Robert Ginn, assistant director of the Harvard University office for career and graduate planning, reports a new practicality and interest in careers among the young people. The campus mood is reportedly becoming more conservative, with few indications of an early change in that trend.

If there is a turn in the American youth tide, its influences will automatically wash over into Canada — as did the more dramatic events of campus unrest a year or two ago.

The old law concerning action and an equal and opposite reaction seems to be once more in effect. The trend may not be wholly beneficial, but it should reduce the incidence of tragic mistakes which a more militant youth era produced.

One Hand on the Helm

Norman Cosulich, president of the B.C. Towboat Owners Association, should claim an attentive ear in Ottawa for his advocacy of a Canadian Coast Guard parallel to that of the United States with authority for enforcement of marine regulations.

"It is apparent," he says, "that we are going to be heavily regulated in the future. However, one of the biggest problems facing this (tug boat) industry today is the task of policing new proposed regulations before they become law and working with them when they do become law. We must avoid at all cost the possibility of a dozen government organizations writing and enforcing marine regulations." Mr. Cosulich questions the effectiveness of fragmented authority, with divided jurisdiction and possible lack of communication one with the other.

The idea deserves study if conflict and confusion are to be avoided in marine matters. A multitude of hands on the wheel, not necessarily tugging the same way, could spell shipwreck for almost any code of regulations.

MAURICE WESTERN

What Are They Waiting For?

OTTAWA — The country is indebted to Ron Basford, Minister of Urban Affairs, for a long-awaited elucidation of the theory of the 11 per cent tax on building materials.

As will be evident from Mr. Basford's comments, in a letter addressed to Donald MacDonald, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, this particular legacy from Walter Gordon has been the subject of much misunderstanding. The main defence of the tax entered by Mr. Gordon was that the Government of 1963 needed new tax sources in order to terminate the long era of deficits. In his canvass of the possibilities the Minister had come to the view that the levy on building materials was the least hurtful of the various alternatives.

It is fascinating, at this date, to consider the example Mr. Gordon gave. By his calculation a $13,000 house would increase by only $500 in price, with the down payment dropping by $100 owing to other changes. The monthly payment facing a home owner would go up a mere $2.15. How times have changed!

Out of Date

Despite the changes many people (perhaps including certain of Mr. Basford's colleagues) have continued to think in the old terms. But the supposed need for revenues has no place in the tax theory of the Minister of Urban Affairs. Affluence has apparently replaced want in government as Marc Lalonde only recently demonstrated when he extracted a commitment from cabinet of an additional $800 millions for the baby-building program.

As Mr. Basford notes, complex issues require full explanations. His remarks on the subject should therefore be quoted in their entirety. They are as follows:

"It is the view of the Government that this would not be the best time to introduce a general stimulus to the construction industry and its suppliers by reducing or eliminating the building materials sales tax.

"The construction industry is presently operating at a high level of output, particularly in housing. The reduction or elimination of the federal sales tax on building materials at this time would lead to cost push types of inflationary adjustment. This would result because there are low levels of unemployment in the skilled trades, and because there is an under supply of essential building materials.

"The Minister of Finance did indicate in his Budget statement that the whole subject of federal sales tax is to be reviewed and reported on before the end of 1974. The place of the building materials tax in the whole context of federal Government sales taxes will form part of this review."

This is most revealing. Mr. Basford, being closer to housing than any of his colleagues, is the first Minister to recognize publicly that we are suffering from a scarcity in essential building materials. Further, and despite talk of housing as a social right, the situation is critical as shown by the fact that the Government is concentrating heavily on subsidized programs and by the additional reality that great numbers of the unsubsidized, who would normally aspire to home ownership, are now shut out of the market.

RONALD BASFORD
. . . not the best time

Building materials are being taxed heavily because they are scarce. This may seem strange; no one, for example, has suggested a tax on beef which has risen sharply in price as demand has outpaced supply. It is apparent from Mr. Basford's argument, however, that the cases are not analogous.

We are being advised, in effect, that the Government is using the tax to regulate the construction industry. How it has been determined that 11 per cent is exactly the amount required to produce the desired output, we are not told. In the ministerial view, however, reduction of the tax or its removal would stimulate the industry, causing the skilled trades to demand higher wages, thus forcing prices even higher.

It may seem rather surprising that Mr. Basford regards cost-push inflation as a prospective threat; other scholars maintain that we have been living with it for some time. But in any case, enough has been revealed of government thinking to prompt other questions: the answers to which surely ought not to be delayed for another two years.

The use of taxes to choke off demand may be justified in some circumstances but it will obviously not help to place people in homes. Why does the Government not concentrate on supply policies, given the admitted shortages of materials and of skilled labor.

On the side of materials, the government could certainly improve home supply of some at least by the use of export controls. It has done this on occasion in the case of copper which is subject to wide fluctuations on the world market. But, according to Mr. Basford, this would not be a good solution because higher demand, resulting from lower materials prices, would merely enable the skilled trades to demand and extract higher wages, thus adding to inflation.

Train More Workers

Then why not tackle the second problem also on the supply side? We are plainly suffering as a nation from a shortage of skilled tradesmen. Why is it impossible to enlist and train more? Where are the bottlenecks and what causes them? It is no answer to say that the government already has training programs: obviously they are not adequate to the crisis situation facing Mr. Basford.

It is quite possible that this would be a rewarding subject for the minister to explore in depth in further correspondence with the President of the CLC.

But this is not all. If we cannot train people, why can we not recruit them abroad? Mr. Basford should pursue this with Mr. Andras. For, if economic activity is being artificially limited by a shortage of trained workers (plus a shortage of building materials, which otherwise could be dealt with), it cannot be doubted that many other potential workers with fewer skills are paying an unnecessary price in unemployment.

In normal circumstances Mr. Turner's promise of a comprehensive two-year study of federal sales taxes would be the sensible approach. But the situation exposed by Mr. Basford is a manifest absurdity: the difficulties and frustrations are here and now. No two-year study was required for the imposition of the tax by Walter Gordon when circumstances were such that its impact was less severe. Nothing in Mr. Basford's letter suggests a case for shelving supply policies for two years when there is already a housing crisis.

C. L. SULZBERGER

'Five Years From Our Goal'

TEHERAN — Iran today finds itself wedged between two of the world's tensest crisis areas. To the west lies Iraq, with which it is on very bad terms, and the festering Middle East, already riven by wars. To the east lies Pakistan, which shows signs of coming apart.

Therefore Shah Mohammad Reza is implacably building up his national military establishment to achieve a capability of self-defence against anyone in non-nuclear war. "That is my ultimate aim," he says. "Some people laughed when I started off this program. But now I estimate we are only about five years away from our goal."

The big switch is substitution of self-reliance for dependence on outside aid. "We can't rely on foreign intervention to help us against aggression," the Shah comments. "After all, why should any country defend another that is unable to defend itself? One must make one's own struggle."

Distrusts Alliances

The Shah no longer places faith in alliances. He says CENTO, which links Iran with Turkey, Pakistan and Britain, plus an indirect American tie, "was never a reality. It was always just a club where people could talk pleasantly. It had no tangible value."

Likewise, he holds no great brief for the U.S. bilateral accord arranged with President Eisenhower. This guaranteed Iran against a Communist threat. But, as the Shah says, "The United States had the privilege of interpreting what 'Communist' meant, no matter what we called it. Moreover, it was not an automatic defence pledge.

"Officially that accord still exists; it hasn't been denounced. But I don't really believe in pacts. I prefer to believe in crude reality and in the paramountcy of national interests. Our relations with America are the same with or without the pact because the United States cannot afford to see anything happen to Iran."

What he means, of course, is that Washington doesn't want Russian dynamism to explode into the Indian Ocean and that American industry cannot afford to risk seeing this land's oil reservoir cut off. That is the "crude reality" on which the Shah bets.

I asked what had been the effect on this strategic concept of both the Nixon Doctrine and the new great power alignment. None, he said. He added: "I developed my own doctrine of a strong Iran fourteen years ago. Nixon understands that there is no other way for a nation to insure its protection than by itself.

Friday Mosque, Iran

"As for the new power alignment: we don't mind it. We are sure you will never do a dirty deal behind our backs. Anyway, you can't afford to."

The Shah says he has been insisting for years on heavy investment in Iran's military build-up even "against the better judgment of our good American friends who thought that with two airborne divisions the United States could police the world." The annual defence budget now approaches the $2 billion level and huge amounts of U.S. supersonic aircraft, helicopters, cargo planes, anti-aircraft missiles and British tanks were on order.

This trend was accelerated after the 1971 war between India and Pakistan. The Shah says: "We saw organized armies crossing international boundaries and nobody did anything about it, not even the United States, while the mass media for the most part applauded this illegality. I opposed Pakistan's military intervention in Bangladesh. But the India-Pakistan war more than ever reinforced our resolve to strengthen Iran's defences."

The problems today facing Iran are seen as linked. Iraq is consistently hostile and encourages subversion among Arab groups along the Persian Gulf. Moreover, Baghdad Radio seeks to foment trouble among the Baluchis of both southeast Iran and southwest Pakistan. Iran never forgets that Iraq leans heavily on Moscow for support.

Primordial Problem

The primordial problem, as the Shah sees it is to prevent West Pakistan from wholly falling apart. He is urging India to help the shaky Pakistani government control autonomist movements in the northwest frontier and Baluchistan provinces. He explains:

"If Pakistan disintegrates, another Vietnam situation could develop. We must see to it that Pakistan doesn't fall to pieces. This would produce a terrible mess, an Indochina situation of new and larger dimensions. I dread to think of it."

And if it came anyway, if Pakistan fell apart? "The least we could do in our own interest would be some kind of protective reaction in Baluchistan." What does that mean? Apparently to seize it before anyone else does. Another "crude reality."

Once there was a public official.

For some twenty years he worked for a corporation.

The End.

Questions for study and review:

1. Who wanted him to get lost?
2. Why?
3. I wonder what he thinks about his dismissal?
4. Are people supposed to know what is going on?

Cedar Hill

I am greatly concerned about the proposal to construct an apartment or medium-density complex adjacent to the Cedar Hill Golf Course. The Municipality of Saanich has already purchased this golf course and one and a half acres of adjacent land for eventual use as a park; but now this admirable, far-sighted action is to be qualified by the erection of an apartment building in an area of single-dwelling residents.

My husband and I have lived for 18 years on Doncaster Drive, enjoying the spectacular, uncluttered views to the north and west, and watching the yearly comings and goings of an unusual number and variety of birds. We are heartsick at the thought of this beautiful area, which is a natural wildlife and human-life sanctuary, being declared open territory for developers. Beacon Hill Park and Oak Bay have seen what happens when doors are opened to highrise; all the best land falls into the hands of business interests, to the dismay and inconvenience of the permanent residents who have invested years and dollars to make these disappearing areas livable.

Are we now to see our properties and the quality of life devalued by sprawling apartments?

I would appeal to all concerned citizens to write to the Saanich Council before Monday, when the final decisions will be made on this proposal. — Thelma Macht, 3322 Doncaster Drive.

LONDON — "The more I know about the British navy the more I have confidence in it," said Hon. Winston Churchill, first Lord of the Admiralty. He said it was great, not merely in respect to numbers, but especially in regard to quality of the ships and men. He declared that the maintenance of an adequate military establishment was essential to an effective naval defence.

Italy Revives The Jackboot

LE MONDE, Paris

Not since the dark days of the rise of fascism has Italy known a wave of violence like that which has swept across it in the past four years. A land that remained little moved by the December 1969 massacre of 18 people in a Milan bank was stunned and disgusted last month when two young men were burned alive in an arson attack on the Rome apartment of a local leader of the MSI neo-fascist party.

Just a few days earlier demonstrators from this same party killed a policeman with grenades flung in a Milan street. This upturn in the spiral of violence led the traditionally sober Corriere della Sera to speak of "civil war" and to draw attention to the dismal precedents of Weimar Germany and Spain under Alphonse XIII. It added drily: "The coup d'etat is now like the atom bomb available in all price ranges."

★ ★ ★

The leader writer was evidently carried to extremes by the emotional atmosphere. Yet the fact is that Italy is sliding into a climate of violence that is equally odious whether it stems from the Left or Right. And there is no escaping this fact, even though intellectuals relax their critical faculties and theoreticians infatuated by the myth of armed power bend over backwards to justify cold-blooded murder. The shows of force by Signor Altamirante's friends and the tumultuous anti-fascist demonstrations in riposte only contribute to the escalation.

Over the past four years the issues have been obscured to such a point that invective and accusations have taken the place of cool analysis, making it extremely difficult to pinpoint responsibility. At least it is possible to draw a distinction between extremists on the Left and the Right.

It is becoming increasingly obvious, particularly since the slaying of the policeman in Milan, that the Rightist demonstrators, despite all denials, are linked with the MSI. There are of course some thugs, disappointed by Signor Altamirante's party's adoption of the "parliamentary way," who are continuing on their violent course in their own interests, but it is clear from a close scrutiny of what the Italian press has come to call "the black trail" that many operations are part of a "strategy of tension" designed to terrorize the electorate and thus prevent any drift to the left.

On the other hand the "red" commandos seem to be independent of any political parties and labour unions. They seem to be receiving no aid from abroad, though Greek government backing has been suggested on several occasions in connection with the operations of the fascist commandos.

Italy has to face these disturbances without benefit of a stable government or a clearly defined policy. Signor Andreotti's cabinet has been severely shaken by 11 consecutive defeats in Parliament. Until the Premier returns from his visits to Washington and Tokyo this week the parties can do no more than put forward programs or extend feelers towards the formation of a new Centre-Left coalition.

The consensus is that a change of cabinet is necessary, since the extreme Right is determined to do all in its power to prevent any return to formerly abandoned formulas while the Communist and Socialist Left fears any move to the Right.

But the manoeuvres and political games preceding the formation of a new government seem trivial in the light of the atrocious happenings last month in the suburbs of Rome.

Finland Bows To the Russians

By ROLAND HUNTFORD
London Observer

Rare authoritative evidence of how the Soviet Union badgers small countries has emerged in Helsinki with the release of an official report recommending the impeachment of a Finnish cabinet minister for disclosing the contents of a conversation between President Urho Kekkonen and Leonid Brezhnev, the Soviet communist party leader.

The conversation, classified as confidential, took place last August at Savodejo, near Moscow, when President Kekkonen was visiting the Soviet Union. The subject of discussion was Finland's relations with the European Economic Community.

Brezhnev is reported to have said that Finland could, if she wished, sign a free trade agreement with the Common Market, but that this could damage relations with the Soviet Union. Finnish-Soviet friendship was too valuable to put at risk. Moreover, an agreement with the Common Market might encourage "rightist circles" within Finland who were inimical to the Soviet Union.

It appeared from the alleged leak that the atmosphere of the conversation was not friendly. There was little doubt that Brezhnev did not approve of a Finnish-Common Market link. Kekkonen was reported to have said that he would guarantee that Finnish relations with the Soviet Union would not suffer. Even then, however, Brezhnev was not entirely satisfied.

This is a demonstration of the reality of what has become known as "Finlandisation." Finland has postponed ratification of the free trade agreement negotiated last year with the Common Market and it was generally assumed that this was caused by deference to Soviet wishes: the report appears to provide proof positive.

Since it has always been the official position both of Finland and the Soviet Union that the Soviet Union does not exert pressure on her small neighbor, the report must be something of an embarrassment to both parties.

For this reason, the affair is causing some perplexity here. The report corroborates the authenticity of a leak which up to now has been open to question. And those concerned are very close to the President.

First, there is Jussi Linnamo, minister of foreign trade. He is nominally responsible for Common Market negotiations, and the agreement with Comecon recently concluded. Perhaps more significantly, however, Antero Jyranki, head of the president's chancery, is also named in the report. The third man is Seppo Lindblom, a former minister of commerce and industry. It is thought unlikely that Jyranki, at least, would have acted without the tacit approval of the president.

KEKKONEN
. . . guarantee

Then, the leak was first published last October, in the Stockholm daily newspaper Dagens Nyheter, and it is common practice for delicate matters affecting relations with Moscow to be discreetly released to the Swedish Press.

It is thought that the report may have been intended as a gesture to Moscow. By putting the blame on three close associates, President Kekkonen may hope to show the Kremlin that any malice was not his. And there is little doubt that he has nothing to gain by proving that those who maintain that Finland lives under Russian pressure are right.

DECLINING TRUST BEGAN BEFORE WATERGATE

Public Confidence Tumbles in U.S. Gov't

By WILLIAM CHAPMAN
The Washington Post

In 1964 a cross section of American voters was asked a series of questions testing the degree to which they had confidence in their government.

"How often can you trust the government?" they were asked by public opinion samplers from the Institute for Social Research.

That year about two-thirds said they thought they could

McCORD
. . . turned tide

trust the government most of the time.

Last fall the same question was asked. Less than half — 45 per cent — were as trusting.

As that and other measurements suggest, the Watergate scandal comes at a time when public confidence in government already is at a low point.

Declining trust is one of the most persistent phenomena of the past decade. The pattern appears in several public opinion polls which record increased cynicism about how the government operates, and whether it tells the truth.

Does the government waste a lot of tax money? In 1964 less than half believed that it did. By last fall, however, two-thirds believed it.

Do you think the government is run for the benefit of a few big interests? About a fourth thought so nine years ago. Now, about half believe it.

The consistent findings have surprised some social scientists who rarely find so fast a change in such a basic public attitude. Public opinion frequently swings wildly on single issues — such as abortion or gun control — but not usually on a fundamental question like whether one trusts one's government.

Basic Discontent

"A situation of widespread, basic discontent and political alienation is the existing condition in the U.S. today," Arthur H. Miller of Ohio State University wrote last in an analysis or responses to questions measuring cynicism.

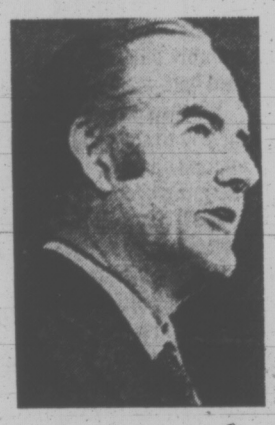

"That some segment of American society believes that officials violate legal procedures in dealing with the public or in arriving at policy decisions is not surprising," he observed.

"What is startling, and somewhat alarming, is the rapid degree of change in this basic attitude over a period of six years."

Until the latest Gallup poll was taken earlier this month, there had been no indication that the Watergate case was having much of an impact on public opinion. It did not figure prominently in the election campaign last fall, despite Sen. George McGovern's efforts to make it a major issue.

Public opinion polls taken then found the vast majority of Americans were writing off Watergate as a piece of petty politics, a kind of Katzenjammer episode involving bungling burglars.

The tide apparently was turned by the assertion of Watergate conspirator James McCord that pressures had been applied to prevent him and other conspirators from disclosing more details.

McGOVERN

The expansive media coverage of the trial and subsequent disclosures focused public attention on Watergate. More than four out of five Americans — an unusually high proportion — are now aware of the case, according to the Gallup poll.

The long-term decline in trust in government in the U.S. however, began in the mid-1960s. No one has measured precisely why the disenchantment set in then, but it is usually associated with two issues — the war in Vietnam and conflicts over civil rights.

In both cases, surveys show, the government's behavior failed to satisfy people of opposite persuasion. Neither hawks nor doves were pleased with the way the United States fought the war in Vietnam, and both civil rights activists and segregationists were unhappy with the government's course in race relations.

Miller's study, for example, found one paradoxical trend of opinion in the field of civil rights legislation and enforcement.

'Cynicism Index'

As laws were passed and enforcement machinery developed, the level of cynicism increased among those in the population who favored them. On a "cynicism index" Miller developed, the confidence of blacks fell more sharply than that of any other group in the population — during the precise period when civil rights legislation was being used to increase black voting, open up restaurants and hotels, and provide better education.

Some public opinion analysts see the decline of trust in government as merely one facet of an overall disenchantment with all institutions, public and private. Recent polls show that during the late 1960s almost all institutions — medicine, the press, business — lost public support.

The polls of Louis Harris and Associates record a dramatic decline among those who say they have "a great deal of confidence" in American institutions.

Forty-one per cent had "a great deal of confidence" in the executive branch of government in 1966, when Harris began the surveys; only 27 per cent expressed a great deal of confidence in it last year. Support for congress fell from 42 to 21 per cent in those six years. Less than a fifth of Americans today say they have a great deal of confidence in the press and television.

Ignorance We Can't Ignore

By JOHN NICHOL

Most Americans don't think of Canada at all. That's the bold fact.

Just guessing — there may be 500,000 Americans who have a professional interest in Canada. There are State Department people who are paid to think North. There are the people who run or own businesses in Canada, or who buy and sell products or ideas across the border.

Then — again guessing — there may be another 2,000,000 Americans who have relatives North of the Border. This includes mothers-in-law and ex-draft dodgers.

And there are a lot of tourists going back and forth. In Canada's Centennial Year (1967) 40,000,000 Americans crossed the border and 32,500,000 Canadians visited the U.S.

But even if you deduct all these groups of Americans, it still appears that at least 190,000,000 Americans have no reason to think of Canada at all.

Some of these may have a hazy image of a half frozen, thinly populated, semi-liberated British Colony somewhere near Niagara Falls. Others may be aware of Quebec as a pocket of cheerful rustics making wood carvings and hooked rugs. There is oil up there, and gas, along with moose hunting and pickerel fishing.

Many Americans feel that they can tell a Canadian by his accent. They think that Canadians say "now" and "about" like an Englishman does. This is widely taken as an ethnic clue.

It would be nice if the 20,000,000 Canadians could ignore all this innocent ignorance, but unfortunately for the Canadians it's bad news that most Americans don't know Canada from Greenland.

Canada is America's greatest trading partner — America's largest supplier in the world market, and also her largest customer.

Canada shares the famous "world's longest undefended border" with the U.S. — 4,000 miles without a slingshot.

Canada co-operates with the U.S. in the joint defence of this continent.

The economic and social connections between the two countries are complicated and intense.

This means that the decisions of American governments, supported by the public opinion of America, have strong impacts in Canada.

Tariff decisions affect jobs. Financial decisions affect corporate earnings and market levels. Shipping decisions (like the Alaska pipeline matter) threaten the ecology.

There is a rising wave of nationalism in Canada. It is strongly tinted with anti-Americanism. At the psychic base of this mood is a desire to confirm to Americans that Canada is not just an enlarged copy of Alaska.

★ ★ ★

Canadians also remember that Canada was, together with the U.S., one of the rebuilders of the world after World War II. Canada neither asked for nor received aid or reconstruction money because she didn't need it and she was busy helping the war ravaged nations herself. She also has pulled her per capita load in NATO and North American defence, and at the UN. So, when the U.S. talks tough as she has in the Nixon trade and exchange crisis that has been going on since August, 1971 — Canada expects to hear a somewhat different tone of voice than the one that is used on Germany or Japan.

There are people in Canada fanning the anti-American flame. There are people in the U.S. trying to call up the spirits of the great Isolationists of the 1930s.

There is a real need for people of reason on both sides of the 49th parallel to speak out — to remember that this is a cold world if you don't have friends.

Provinces Scrutinize B.C. Base Pay

By IAN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Canada's labor ministers have rejected the principle of a uniform minimum wage across the country, but are watching closely B.C.'s experience with its $2-an-hour wage floor.

Labor Minister John Munro announced at the end of the two-day federal-provincial labor ministers conference here Thursday that Ottawa will collaborate with B.C. in a study of the effects on employment rates and conditions, of the highest minimum wage in the country.

He said the conference rejected the idea of a uniform minimum wage across Canada, with future increases tied to increases in the cost of living, and supported instead absolute raises in separate jurisdictions in stages, with enough warning to allow industry to adjust.

He called the recent B.C. increase in the minimum wage from $1.50 to $2 an hour "one of the most outstanding examples of an absolute increase." The province has proposed to increase the wage floor further to $2.50 an hour by 1974.

Munro said that B.C. has not noticed any great dislocation of employment as a result of the high minimum wage, but that some provinces had expressed concern about the effects of such a level, particularly on part-time employment and cutbacks in payrolls by employers paying low wages.

B.C.'s labor minister, Bill King, said it is significant that the federal government wants to collaborate with the province in assessing the impact, if there is any impact, of the high minimum wage level in B.C.

King also said in an interview after the conference that he had secured from the federal minister a commitment to try to bring more "rationalization" into the question of industrial safety and health in areas of federal jurisdiction.

He said that he expressed concern about enforcement of safety and health standards over railway workers and longshoremen who fall under Ottawa's jurisdiction. Questions of health and safety, he noted, have in the past been the cause of work stoppages in these two areas, seriously disrupting the economy.

However, he said, the federal transport department, and not the labor department which sets health and safety standards for these workers, has been charged with the enforcement of them with the result that there is often "a no-man's land" in responsibility.

King said it has not yet been determined whether the "rationalization" promised by Munro will mean greater control over enforcing these standards for the province or a more efficient form of federal control.

Munro told reporters after the conference that the labor ministers also agreed to set up a study of the causes of work stoppages during the term of contracts.

He said the motivation for the study was widely-held concern that excessive penalties — including fines and jail terms — are not the best remedies for settling illegal strikes and lockouts.

This week's meeting was the first federal-provincial labor ministers conference in two years, and Munro said it is possible that because of the success in this one, another may be held next year.

He stated the ministers agreed that there is a need for greater communication between Ottawa and the provinces on labor matters "and for increased consultation among their jurisdictions" on a more frequent basis.

NEEDLES CURE DEAF?

Special to The Times

CANTON — Canadian doctors watched Thursday as deaf children sang, danced and recited quotations from Chairman Mao in a demonstration of Chinese claims that hearing can be restored by acupuncture.

A doctor at the Canton School for Deaf Mutes told the Canadians that 80 per cent of the children admitted to the school for acupuncture treatment have recovered some degree of hearing, with a handful recovering sufficiently to be returned to normal schools.

In support of the claims the doctor led the Canadians on a tour of the school, showing them the children having their ears needled, running through simple hearing and speech tests and performing excerpts from revolutionary ballet.

The Canadians, members of a delegation drawn together by the Canadian Medical Association, met after the visit and agreed to take a cautious position in public when they return home lest they raise false hopes among the parents of the thousands of deaf mute children in Canada.

Bette Stephenson, a general practitioner in Toronto, put forward the agreed view when she said that the doctors had seen nothing during their visit to the school to prove or disprove the claim that acupuncture improves hearing.

Among themselves the doctors took a somewhat more positive view, agreeing that what they saw was enough to justify a research program in Canada if a qualified acupuncturist can be found.

Anik Satellite Sails Into Black

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Special to The Times

OTTAWA — After only five months of commercial operation of Canada's unique domestic communications satellite system, Telesat Canada Corporation is already operating in the black, according to a Telesat spokesman.

The commercial success, which promises to not only continue but also strengthen in coming months, has arrived considerably sooner than expected, the spokesman admitted Thursday.

For the corporation's present shareholders — the federal government, with $30 million in stocks; and the designated common carriers Bell Canada, the Trans Canada Telephone System member companies, and CN-CP Telecommunications with another $30-million block — it now seems worth all the effort.

ICING

And then there's additional icing for the cake. A windfall of revenues from a number of American concerns to use the back-up Anik-2 satellite, to the tune of $5 million or more a year, for at least two years.

But for the public, or more correctly the would-be public, Telesat shareholders' success will likely mean considerably less than the $30 million in public stock issue and considerably less than the one-third control of Telesat envisioned by the government three years ago when it established Telesat Canada.

The reasons offered by Telesat for offering the public less of the action, if any at all, are:

—With the better-than-expected success, Telesat doesn't need all of the money the planned $30-million public subscription of shares would bring.

—With Telesat now operating properly, there's no longer the risk factor present for investors that was present several years ago, when the government and the common carriers were offered half each of the action.

The question of when Telesat would issue the one-third block of shares to the public has been with the corporation since before it was legally born. Now there's a question of whether the public shares will be issued.

At first, parliamentarians guessed the stock would be issued to the public along with the shares issued to the other two partners, the government and the common carriers.

Then, the date for the public issue slipped by several months, until after Telesat was organized.

The last public statement by Telesat President David Golden, who holds the one outstanding $10 public share, pin-pointed the when as being possibly as late as just after the first satellite was launched and working. That date has come and gone.

The word Thursday from Telesat was that the board of directors had decided at its last meeting in April that there is no immediate need for issuing the public shares.

'Hot' Cars Burn Buyers, Dealers

NANAIMO (CP) — The problem of buyers and dealers being innocently trapped with stolen cars and cars with outstanding liens is reaching epidemic proportions, says Jack Harrison, president of the Nanaimo Automobile Dealers Association.

He said that a lack of co-ordination in the Motor Vehicle Branch in Victoria and the absence of a law making lien clearance compulsory in automobile transactions was causing the problems.

Harrison said the issue will be one of the main topics for discussion at the June meeting of the B.C. branch of the Federated Automobile Dealers' Association meeting at Harrison Hot Springs.

If a person has an address in Alberta, he can get plates for a car stolen in B.C. by simply writing to the Alberta government which will mail the plates and registration to B.C., Harrison explained. The Alberta government is concerned only about the serial and identification numbers and is unaware that the car was stolen in B.C. The car can then be traded off in a B.C. dealer's lot or sold to a private citizen, Harrison said.

He said it can take as much as 30 days for a lien search to be made in Victoria and by that time an automobile transaction may be finished. If the car has a lien against it, the unsuspecting new owner may have his car repossessed.

Alberta Bottle Return Law Keeps Ditches Cleaner

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta now has a cleaner environment with the glass container return system working much better after having had the initial bugs ironed out, according to a provincial environment official.

Ken Simpson, head of the department's special services branch, said: "We've had a lot of good reports on roads and ditches, there aren't too many bottles lying around."

"The system is 1,000 per cent better than in January and the public doesn't have to wait 2½ hours to return their bottles anymore."

Alberta's bottle-return legislation became effective Jan. 2 and universal depots were set up to provide rebates for wine, liquor and soft drink containers.

During the first four months this year, consumers returned 32 million containers to 146 depots, half of them refillable soft drink bottles and the rate of return is steadily increasing, Simpson said.

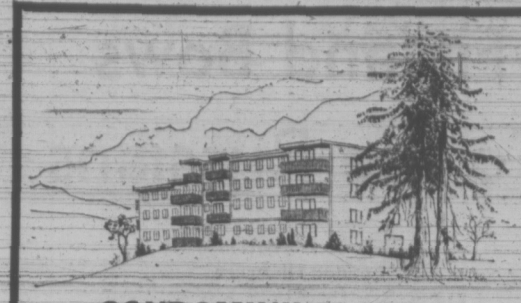

He said about 80 per cent of bottles being sold are being returned, almost double the rate a year ago.

The system is effectively reducing the amount of solid waste and is stimulating research into better ways to reuse containers.

"Manufacturers are moving away from non-returnable bottles and these types of containers now make up only three per cent of the total, an improvement over the five per cent in January," Simpson said.

"We're reversing the trend to convenience packages. In the United States 80 per cent of the bottles are throwaways. It's hard to find refillables down there."

Initially the non-returnable glass containers were being crushed and buried in land fill sites but they now are being stockpiled as demands for reusable glass mount.

To Them It's French Columbia

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Most people in B.C. interpret the province's initials as standing for British Columbia.

If a group of 10,000 B.C. residents had their way, however, B.C. would become F.C. — French Columbia.

The 10,000 — actually somewhere between 8,000 and 10,000 — are members of the Federation of French Columbians, known in French as the Federation des Franco-Columbiens. And although they had not told anyone officially about it, they have been calling themselves by that name for two years.

The group's original name was the French-Canadian Federation of British Columbia, which is a mouthful in anyone's language. Through a notice published in the April 19 edition of the B.C. Gazette, the name was officially changed to Federation of French Columbians.

According to one of the group's spokesmen, the change of name was not so much an attempt to delete the word British from British Columbia as it was a move to shorten the organization's name and make it more widely representative.

Yves Margraff, information officer for the federation, said there is no desire among most of the federation's members to dissociate from English-speaking British Columbians.

"We have nothing against history," he said, "but at the same time we would like other Canadians to be aware of our part in our shared history."

Margraff said the move to change the federation's name, which was made two years ago at the annual convention, was initiated by non-Canadian French-speaking members, who felt that Franco-Columbiens would be a more applicable name for French Canadians as well as for people who have come to Canada from other countries.

The original name was also rather long, he said.

Margraff said there are abut 38,000 French-speaking people living in B.C., of whom between 8,000 and 10,000 are affiliated with the federation.

About 60 local community groups of French-speaking people are connected, with groups as far away as Terrace, Fort St. John and Prince Rupert. There are also groups in the Okanagan, the Kootenays, Vancouver Island and several on the lower mainland, he said.

Several credit unions and a number of schools are also affiliated and a full-time staff of six work out of the federation's office in downtown Vancouver.

During the 1972 fiscal year, the group received grants of $12,000 from the Secretary of State's department and $6,000 from the ministry of cultural affairs.

The federation's annual convention this year is to be held at the University of B.C. — or should that be F.C.? — over the Victoria Day weekend.

The French people are not the first to come up with a new idea for this province's name.

The Esquimalt constituency association of the New Democratic Party came up with the name Canadian Columbia and proposed it to the NDP's provincial convention last fall.

In the minds of most people, however, British Columbia is still British Columbia.

MAILS TO FLOW AGAIN

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Supreme Court Thursday granted an injunction preventing Teamsters union members from continuing their picket line around the main post office here.

Mr. Justice Albert Mackoff ruled that no legal strike had been called and there was serious disruption of mail service caused by the picketline.

He issued the injunction at the request of the federal attorney-general, who sought the order against Teamsters local 31, Blair Whitlock, Allan Woolcott, Edward Zimmerman, S. Lacroix and unidentified picketers at the main post office.

the picket line, put up Tuesday, disrupted truck mail deliveries to the Kootenay and Okanagan areas, Vancouver Island and Seattle. First-class mail service to the communities continued.

The dispute began when the post office awarded a contract to a non-union company, Ponderosa Trucking of Mission, to haul daily mail shipments to Prince George, Prince Rupert and Terrace. Those deliveries were not affected.

The decision led to the laying-off of 10 Teamsters union members, who had worked for Pony Express Trucking, which previously held the contract.

ARMED BEGGARS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayor Art Phillips said Thursday beggars with long knives are causing a serious problem on city streets.

He told the police commission the abolition of federal laws against begging and carrying sheathed knives creates a special problem in some sections of the city.

He said he has asked Police Chief John Fisk to prepare a report on the situation.

Pearl Case Appeal Rejected

VANCOUVER (CP) — Eugene Killam, a prominent Vancouver businessman, began a five-year term Thursday after failing in British Columbia Appeal Court to upset his conviction for possessing stolen pearls worth about $1 million.

Killam was sentenced earlier by Judge Maurice Mulligan who found him guilty of possessing the pearls, stolen in a robbery in Seattle in December, 1969.

Since his conviction, Killam has been free for 14 months on $15,000 bail.

Killam appeared on 29 grounds, the main one being that the Crown failed to prove he had knowledge that the pearls were stolen as opposed to being smuggled into Canada.

He also said the judge erred in admitting a statement made to police who asked Killam for an explanation of how the pearls came into his possession.

According to the evidence, Killam got the pearls some eight and a half months after the robbery and there was an indication he had been told the pearls had been brought from Vietnam and were in possession of a man in Seattle who wanted to sell them.

Anderson To Tour

B.C. Liberal leader David Anderson will make a seven-day tour of northern B.C. later this month, his office said Thursday.

Anderson will start May 16 at Fort St. John and will travel to eight other northern communities.

He will stop at Dawson Creek, Prince George, Vanderhoof, Burns Lake, Smithers, Terrace, Kitimat and Prince Rupert.

b.c. briefs

Don't Impose on North, Wildlife Meeting Told

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Prince George Mayor Harold Moffat told the 17th annual British Columbia Wildlife Federation convention Thursday wilderness areas must not be imposed upon Northern B.C.

Mayor Moffat praised convention organizers for their choice of topic — man and resources in Northern B.C. — but he voiced concern with what he termed "a trend of some B.C. groups to impose their selfish interests on others."

He said development of the North has been long awaited but long-time residents feel "like Indians when the white people took their land."

He said the North must be built in a manner "compatible with the needs of all people," citing the example of old trappers and guides who have long inhabited remote areas of the North.

"The old fellows knew better. Today the fish in the lake are small because there are too many fish," said Moffat.

Asylum Denied

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Croation seaman who jumped ship in Vancouver last fall has been denied political asylum, an immigration spokesman said Thursday.

Franjo Jaram, 26, deserted the freighter Solaris here last Sept. 22. He now will be granted an immigration special inquiry as a seaman deserter. No date has been set.

Cycle Gang Charged

SURREY (CP) — Bail of $10,000 each was set Thursday for Douglas Riddoch, Robert Strain and Michael Rogerson, all charged with rape, indecent assault, assault causing bodily harm, unlawful confinement and gross indecency.

The three men, all members of the Gypsy Wheelers Motorcycle Club, and three others also charged, will appear for preliminary hearing March 9. Charges were laid after a woman was taken to a shack in Surrey where she was raped and beaten.

Dumping Fine: $400

SURREY (CP) — Billan Trucking Co. Ltd. and owner Jarnal Billan were fined a total of $400 Thursday on four counts each of dumping mill waste and trash on vacant lots without a pollution control board permit.

Gage Leaving UBC

VANCOUVER (CP) — Allan McGavin, chairman of the University of British Columbia board of governors, said Thursday university president Walter Gage has announced he will resign effective June 30, 1975. No reason for the resignation was given.

8 Years for Death

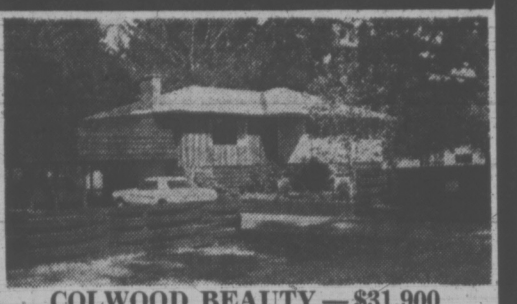

VANCOUVER (CP) — Leo Leblanc, 46, was sentenced Thursday to eight years in prison after pleading guilty to manslaughter in the strangulation death of Mildred Virginia Lecompte, 40, last Nov. 15. Leblanc was originally charged with non-capital murder but pleaded guilty to the reduced charge in B.C. Supreme Court.

Brisk Sales, Fewer Salesmen Cause for Real Estate Smiles

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Being a real estate salesman is not always a bed of roses. But things are looking up.

Business has seldom been so brisk, prices have never been higher. And at last the number of salesmen is levelling off.

By provincial order no new licensing courses can begin this year, effectively freezing the number of salesmen in the field.

This means 7,100 across the province, 700 of them in the Victoria area.

Discussions are under way between the government and real estate boards about possible improvements in the industry, mainly for the betterment of the salesmen.

Among the ideas under discussion are:

—Some form of salary for first-year salesmen based upon the minimum wage. The salaries would be sort of an advance against expected future commissions.

—Some permanent restrictions on the number of salesmen hired in B.C. Salesmen have criticized some firms for over-hiring, leaving many working at subsistence levels.

The freeze on licensing of new salesmen will continue for the balance of 1973 to give the provincial government and the industry time to find a permanent solution.

Those already attending courses will be licensed if they pass but no new applications are being accepted. With normal staff turnover, the few 1973 licences issued are expected to be balanced out by retirements.

While the number of salesmen is levelling off, business is growing.

Probably nowhere more so than in Victoria.

Total sales under the Multiple Listing Service in this area totalled almost $7 million during April, a 100 per cent increase over the $3.5 million last April.

This follows the trend of each month in 1973 about doubling the MLS volume of the previous year.

The Victoria Real Estate Board has expanded staff to handle the new business, hiring S. G. Eales to assist manager John Hicks. Eales will take charge of MLS listing and printing activities while Hicks supervises other board business, not the least of which is helping to organize the provincial real estate convention which opens here May 26. More than 500 delegates are expected from across B.C.

Main reason for the big increase in MLS volumes is a reduction in the commission rate for homes under $27,000.

The weekly printout of revised listings also helps the salesmen to move properties.

Total staff at the real estate board office now is 12 including Hicks, Eales, two printers and eight secretaries.

In charge of the operation is Eric Charman, recently re-elected as board chairman.

'LACK OF SUPPORT' CAUSES SASKATOON FIRM TO MOVE

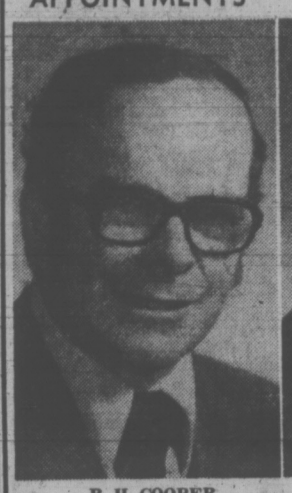

SASKATOON (CP) — The operation of an air-conditioning firm will be moved to Edmonton because of a "lack of support" from the Saskatchewan government, Jim Marsh said Thursday.

Marsh, vice-president in charge of production and marketing for Buffalo Package Equipment Ltd., said his firm had planned a $750,000 expansion in Saskatoon.

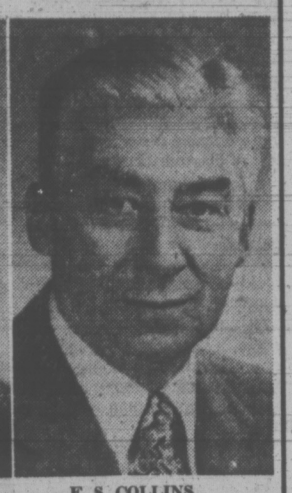

He said the firm waited about eight months for a reply from the provincial government on possible financial assistance in the form of a loan and then applied in Alberta.

A reply was received from Edmonton within one week and Alberta officials visited Saskatoon to discuss a possible move, Marsh said.

Mutual Funds' Role 'Assured'

WINNIPEG (CP) — Pension fund and other professional investment managers remain confident that equities will prove to be worthwhile long-term investment, R. H. Jones, president of the Investors Group, said Thursday.

He told the annual meeting mutual funds are assured of an important role in the savings and capital process because they provide the primary vehicle for the majority of individual investors to participate in the growth of the economy.

Jones said the excess of fund redemptions over sales which has characterized the industry for some time can be attributed to a variety of factors rather than any single cause.

Mutual funds enjoyed a spectacular growth rate in the 1950s and 1960s and it should not have been surprising to see a slowing down once the adjustment was completed.

"What was not foreseen, however, were the excesses of the late '60s wherein too many investors, and unfortunately too many fund managers, treated portfolios as vehicles for speculative purposes.

"This brought about a painful reaction which was superimposed on the already normal slowing down of the industry's growth.

"In addition, the relatively few but importnt instances of malfeasance, the resultant major and unpleasant publicity, and the exodus of large numbers of sales representatives from the industry reinforced the difficulties which have been and are being experienced in both Canada and the United States."

The total impact, he said, was worsened by the underlying trend in equity markets during the last few years. Stresses in world trading patterns and international monetary relationships, inflation, and recurring credit crises were among factors creating a trying environment for equity investment.

"On an over-all basis the rewards to the common stock buyer in North America have been inadequate and disappointing in relation to the vital role which he fulfills in the capital process.

"The resultant fallout has not been confined to mutual funds but is reflectd in the results of all whose function is associated with equity markets."

Oil Rights In Alberta Yield $100M

EDMONTON (CP) — Revenue by the Alberta government from the sale of petroleum and natural gas rights during the first quarter of 1973 was $100.7 million, compared with $73.9 million the previous year.

A report issued by the department of mines and minerals said almost $11 million was received from the sale of crown reserves in the three months ending March 31, 1973, compared with $4.2 million for the same period in 1972.

Royalties on oil, gas and gas products totalled about $69 million, compared with $51 million for the first quarter last year.

Revenue from land rentals was $20.6 million, up from $18.7 million in 1972.

The report said 79.7 million acres in the province were held under crown leases, reservations and permits for petroleum and natural gas rights as of March 31, 1973.

Nixon Ties Stability, Economics

By MARILYN BERGER
Washington Post
(An Analysis)

WASHINGTON — The underlying theme of President Nixon's foreign policy report is that world stability depends on the solution of the economic problems that have grown to challenge traditional political and defence partnerships.

Threaded through the report released Thursday is the primacy of economics — highlighted by the persistence of adverse U.S. balance of payments and balance of trade figures — and the primacy of finding economic solutions within a political context. This, in effect, was the president's prescription for "shaping a durable peace," the subtitle of his annual report.

"We have moved far toward resolving political differences through negotiation in recent years," Nixon wrote. "But the peace and stability we seek could be jeopardized by economic conflicts."

On the other hand, he wrote, "economic relations can become a source of strength and harmony among countries rather than a source of friction."

Nixon said that "the overriding talks is to develop a broader political perspective from which we can address these economic questions that encourage reconciliation of differences for the sake of larger goals."

That larger goal of political alliance and allied security had been challenged by economic rivalries. "Can the principle of Atlantic unity in defence and security be reconciled with the European (Economic) Community's increasingly regional economic policies?" asked the president in his report. The theme had been sounded a week ago in a speech by presidential national security adviser Henry Kissinger.

Turning to Japan, the president said that "persistent disputes over ... economic issues threaten to disrupt the political relations that hold our alliance together: the imbalance is a threat to a stable international system in which Japan itself has a major stake."

For the developing countries of Latin America, Africa and South Asia, Nixon had pledges of support for development. And he sought allies among them in forthcoming trade negotiations with the stronger economic powers. The United States, he said, shared an interest with Latin America "in assuring an expansion of world trade and in preventing the rise of restrictive trading blocs which would inhibit the growth of U.S. and Latin American commerce."

He also warned Africa against disruptive "preferential arrangements discriminating against competing American products."

It was a message to Europe more than to Latin America or Africa, a plea to the Common Market to relinquish its preferential trading system with developing nations of Africa in favor of generalized preferences.

The main thrust of the report was that if security and political issues were to be resolved, economic relations with the world's major industrial, non-Communist, powers would have to be put on a new plane. The economic dynamism of Europe and Japan had created what the president called a "changed international environment."

In the past, he said, "America had been the automatic source of political leadership and economic power. Now we needed new modes of action that would accommodate our partners' new dynamism. The challenge was to reconcile traditional unity with new diversity."

In the past, the United States had concentrated on the organization of a mutual defence system while Western Europe and Japan, protected by the American nuclear umbrella, recovered from the devastation of war and finally became what Kissinger described Thursday as economic "superpowers." In the early years, the United States took its economic supremacy for granted. Now, with vigorous competition from abroad, the United States is seeking an economic balance of power.

With Europe, the report reflected, the move was "from American predominance to balanced partnerships." With Japan, Nixon wrote of 1972, "there was continued evolution toward a more mature and equitable partnership." He said, however, that "serious economic problems" with Japan continued and that "relations with Tokyo will be an area of prime attention during the coming year."

The clear message in both instances was that Europe and Japan should assume responsibilities commensurate with their improved world economic position.

To Kill or Not to Kill That Magnificent Weed?

Being some selected items from a man's personal diary:

Item: Wonderful news from jolly old Britain this ayem which I made mighty sure came to my wife's attention, though whether it will resolve our annual early summer spat remains to be seen.

Ever since the dear girl took on the job of restoring an ancient, weed-filled lawn, a job she's done with absolute dedication and an expenditure of no more than $91,000, she's been absolute death on dandelions. In my assigned role as Chief Mower I have made tortured efforts, much to her displeasure, to manage the chore without slicing the top from a single dandelion.

The point I make is this: "The dandelion is one of nature's gems, a wild thing yet as bright and beautiful as any domestic bloom. I would as soon cut a carnation as a dandelion."

The point my wife makes is this: 'The dandelion is a flag showing where a weed grows. The weed must go and so must the dandelion."

So much for the impasse. Divorces have been granted on lesser grounds.

Ah, but now the wonderful news from Britain where, it seems, London's famous Kew Gardens is staging an exhibition of dandelions, a flower in danger of extinction from just such zealous, lawn-loving gardeners as my wife. Not only that, but several conservation groups have banded together in a save-the-dandelion campaign, though the people at Kew Gardens think the poor thing is doomed.

I have put the problem of cutting or not cutting to Jack Beastall, a man my wife trusts implicitly, but Jack is no help at all. Just says, "It depends entirely on how you feel about dandelions."

Item: Into the chief editorialist's office this morning, a quiet, intellectual oasis from the news room, and found the chief editorialist in a brooding mood, in keeping with a man whose job it is to comment each day on the global insanities.

It seemed likely that the chief editorialist might be in this introspective frame of mind as the result of the television appearance of President Nixon, a cornered weasel if ever there was one, but it turned out there was something more perplexing than Watergate troubling him.

Wordlessly, the chief editorialist handed over a brief news release from the Patent Office in Ottawa.

"Worried about confidential documents being photocopied without permission?" the item asked. "Then the Xerox Corporation may soon have a solution for your problems. Canadian Patent 917,701, granted to the Xerox Corporation, discloses a way of coating a document with a light-emitting material making it readable to the human eye but unreadable to a photo-copying machine."

The chief editorialist arose and gazed glumly from his window.

"What do you say when a photocopier makes a copy that can't be copied?" he asked of the world. "What do you say?"

I tip-toed away and left him to his thoughts.

Item: Reading today what seemed, at first, a routine interview with Victor Borge, the unmelancholy Dane, only to discover that it contained an inspiring philosophy.

Borge had this to say: "Life is a gift. To me every morning is a new life . . . It is to be expected that the unexpected will happen. Things change . . . I believe in defensive living. Expect the worst because that is expectable, but be deeply grateful when things go right. If you escape disappointment, be deeply grateful — but don't expect that's the way it is supposed to be . . . Laughter is as important as anything in life. With a lighter mind you don't weigh so much."

They're words that are just about perfect to begin any day.

Item: The work going badly this morning, as it has all week for no apparent reason, so I phoned the lady to pack some chicken and wine and we sneaked away to Windy Oaks, that fine beach out past Metchosin, for our first picnic of the year.

Warm sun, a cooling breeze off the open Pacific, deep blue water, fields of buttercups behind us. Who could ask for anything more?

We'd thought, at first, that we had that whole stretch of gravelled beach to ourselves, but then, far down the shore, we saw that we were sharing this clean, bright, open world. The boy and girl would be in their early twenties, I'd guess, prototypes of those youngsters we call "hippies," for want of a better word, but they frolicked as little children do, running into the water, skipping stones, wrestling, their easy laughter borne down to us on the breeze.

It was, I suppose, a kind of love dance, utterly charming and uninhibited, but it seemed to me such an expression of complete freedom that I was filled with wonder and envy.

'Spirit' Ready For Its Flight To City

By AB KENT
Times Staff

If all goes well the morning of May 19 a bright red and blue speck approaching Victoria over Juan de Fuca Strait will be the first model aircraft in North America to cross an international water boundary.

Victoria Radio Control Model Club will sponsor the flight by the "Spirit of Victoria" from Ediz Hook at Port Angeles, Wash., to Clover Point.

Barring misfortune, the plane loaded with five pounds of fuel will take off from the paved road leading to the Hook's U.S. Coast Guard station, guided by radio commands given from a 25-foot cruiser.

Looking much like the Spirit of St. Louis, flown over the Atlantic by Charles Lindberg, the four-foot model with the six-foot wingspan designed by the Victoria club will take off about 8:30 a.m. when wind and sea should be still.

★

A similar project has not been accomplished since the middle 1950s when a radio-controlled model was flown successfully over the English Channel from England to France, a distance of about 21 miles.

Juan de Fuca Strait is 18.3 miles from Ediz Hook to the Dallas Road waterfront, a route which was swum 17 years ago by Marilyn Bell.

Mac McNally, a director of the club, said the plane will need a long takeoff run because of its heavy fuel load, giving an all-up weight of about 11 pounds.

The alcohol-castor oil fuel mixture will be carried in a large fibreglass wing tank of about half-gallon capacity.

Below that will be a gravity-fed pressure tank to ensure a constant fuel-air mix, which cannot be adjusted once the plane has taken off.

The four controls altered by radio signal are aileron, elevator, rudder and throttle.

★

Flying time is expected to be about one hour at speeds ranging from 20 to 50 miles an hour, depending on water conditions affecting progress of the pilot boat.

Because the boat will not be able to approach Clover Point close enough for the pilot to see the landing place properly, a second pilot will be waiting ashore with dual radio controls.

A tricky point in the exercise will be the simultaneous switchover from one set of controls to the other, which will have to be done with auxiliary radio or by visual signal.

The Spirit of Victoria will fly within sight at all times, probably no more than 500 feet above the strait.

McNally said the club has had enough foresight to build a standby aircraft in case the first one crashes on takeoff. It is of nearly identical design with color scheme reversed.

MR. AVERAGE TO PAY $952 TAX ON HOME

If you live in Saanich . . .

If you're Mr. Average in an average $33,000 home . . .

And if that average home is in the urban part of the municipality . . .

Mr. Average will be paying $952 gross in taxes.

As well as setting the tax rate Thursday, Saanich also increased the charges for those living in the sewered area.

Sewer charges were increased by $11.15 to $84.30.

These charges include $63 for capital projects and $21.30 as a user charge.

Back to Jail For Young Pair

A pair of two-time escapers who admitted stealing more than $6,000 in a series of Greater Victoria house-breakings were returned to jail today by a disconcerted Judge William Ostler.

Paul Alexander Telfer, 18, was sent to Haney Correctional Institute for 18 months definite and 18 months indeterminate.

His companion in the four break-ins, 17-year-old Geoffery Anthony Green was given a one-year definite, one year indeterminate sentence.

The pair must also serve the unexpired terms prior to their escapes.

"It appears neither of you has responded" to earlier jail sentences, said Ostler, adding his hope that they would abandon criminal activity "in the fullness of time."

Green and Telfer escaped from New Haven April 15. Eleven days later the two were arrested in Oak Bay, leaving a trail of house breakins in Esquimalt and Oak Bay in which $6,180 worth of goods were stolen.

Telfer had been sentenced in Vancouver to nine months last Nov. 3 on charges of theft, break-in, possession of stolen property, failure to attend court and a driving offence.

Two weeks later he received an additional four months in Burnaby for a jail escape.

Green had been sentenced Feb. 5 in Victoria to five months definite, 6 months indeterminate for theft, break-in and possession of stolen property. He received an extra six months March 29 in Burnaby for a jail escape.

Hoadley Named Superintendent

The department of education today appointed a Saanich school principal as district superintendent of schools for a district to be named later.

N. B. Hoadley, principal of Reynolds Secondary School, was one of six educators named by the department to fill positions which will become vacant Aug. 1.

The appointments included the first woman to be appointed a district superintendent of schools. Frances Fleming is now vice-principal of Magee Secondary School in Vancouver.

City Abandons Two Mall Plans For Downtown

By ROLAND MORGAN
Times Staff

Just one year after Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen led a group on a trip to Europe to inspect traffic-free city areas, Victoria has abandoned both its tentative mall projects. There are no more plans in the works.

An ambitious scheme to close Government Street downtown was abandoned several weeks ago following the report of a Seattle traffic expert.

The plan is now to compromise . . . by widening sidewalks and reducing the street to two lanes.

Broad Street, first eyed for a mall seven years ago to connect Bastion Square, Trounce Alley and Centennial Square, is now scheduled to carry seven bus lines, as one-way routings are introduced on Johnson and Pandora.

The plan is to run more than 20 buses per hour, making quiet Broad Street into what one senior city official dispargingly termed "a service lane."

The new system is due to start June 3, a Sunday.

TURNING AREA

The bus lines, each running three buses per hour, will use Broad Street as a kind of clover leaf turning area for terminals in the downtown area.

Although no formal executive decisions had been made about the Broad Street mall proposal, the scheme had been considered in some quarters as "a natural," since it is already a mall at the south end and another four city blocks carry low traffic volumes.

When the Government Street mall proposal, pushed by Alderman Sam Bawlf, was discarded as too drastic for the city's traffic situation, planning officials and others were thinking the Broad Street mall would be an obvious alternative.

NO COMMENT

The bus re-routing, organized by city traffic engineer Dave Campbell, with B.C. Hydro bus officials, was greeted without comment at a meeting of city council's traffic committee earlier this week.

One senior city hall planner said: "It's embarrassing since there appears to have been a failure to co-ordinate the activities of two city departments which naturally pursue the needs of their specialized areas."

A traffic official said he thought the Broad Street mall proposal did not exist any more.

SAFETY patroller Mike Laitinen, 12, of 5815 West Saanich Road has been chosen to represent 54 Greater Victoria schools at the 14th national School Patrol Jamboree in Ottawa May 18 and 19. Mike, a Grade 6 student at Durrance Elementary, joins 14 other B.C. students for the trip to the capital.

Get-Away-From-It-All Vehicles Featured at the Outdoor Show

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Machines which allow you to get-away-from-it-all are now featured at the annual Outdoor Show at the Esquimalt Sports Centre.

There's a little one-seater hovercraft selling for $2,295.

For many it is a delightful vehicle which can skim over land and water and run about 130 miles on a couple of gallons of gasoline.

But for others who like isolation the craft sent shudders down their spines.

"Just think," said one observer, "if these lighter than air vehicles ever become as popular as boats and cars, there won't be an isolated wilderness beach or cove on Vancouver Island which is not within easy reach of man."

There is also a little mini-car which the makers advertise as the ideal companion for camping, fishing or hunting — "or just exploring the great outdoors and getting the tension out of your system."

It's not new but is not yet as popular here as it is in eastern areas.

The rugged, little one-seater machine eliminates walking and hiking. It can be driven in high country over delicate colonies of alpine flowers, along shallow stream beds and over the forest floor.

The maker's brochure depicts one young man charging his mini-car through the underbrush, getting the tension out of his system.

There is no wildlife in sight.

It is recommended as the perfect machine for mixed safaris, rallies and group excursions.

But the outdoor show is not just an exhibition of such machines.

There is plenty to see — all types of exhibits representing all phases of outdoor living.

There is a small dinghy with a folding mast — ideal for sailing on Vancouver Island lakes. It can be fitted to a cartop rack.

There is a wide range of fast water kayaks, canoes and water cycles — light tents and back-packing equipment for those who plan wilderness holidays this summer.

The backyard enthusiast has not been forgotten. Exhibits include the newest lawn and patio furniture, barbecues, swimming pools and children's playground equipment.

The show also has a large display of folding tent trailers, trailers and motor homes. Power boats and accessories are also featured.

The promoters of the show have provided a wide variety of entertainment for visitors. Members of the Pacific Swimming School will show how to teach six-month-old babies to swim.

The popular Sun Dancers of Vancouver will perform on a trampoline.

The show closes at 7 p.m. Sunday.

Hawks Get Away Fast To Topple Canadiens

CHICAGO (CP) — Chicago's injury-plagued Black Hawks rebounded Thursday night to nail Montreal with a 7-4 setback that left the Canadiens with a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup final.

Stan Mikita, who missed the second game of the series at Montreal with a cut middle finger on his right hand, scored once and assisted on two other goals.

And defenceman Doug Jarrett, who suffered a broken rib in a collision with Montreal's Rejean Houle in the second game, came back strong while taking a regular shift.

"It didn't surprise me," Montreal coach Scotty Bowman said of the appearance of the two veterans in the Chicago lineup although they had been listed as doubtful starters. "I expected them to play."

Jarrett, who had his back heavily taped for the contest, said later as he stripped it off:

"I feel great."

The fourth game of the series is scheduled for here Sunday. Starting time is 12 p.m. PDT and the game will be televised nationally by the CBC.

Chicago took advantage of early power play opportunities Thursday for goals by Dennis Hull and Jean-Pierre Bordeleau. Short-handed goals a minute apart by defenceman Bill White and Mikita —both with Hull in the penalty box— pushed the Hawks into a 4-0 first-period lead.

John Marks got another power play goal early in the second period to make it 5-0.

Frank Mahovlich started a Montreal rally with his seventh goal of the playoff season in the second period and the Canadiens pulled to within one goal of the Hawks with third-period scores by Yvan Courneyer, Guy Lapointe and Jacques Lemaire.

The Canadiens threatened to tie the game up in the last few minutes but the Hawks held on and clinched the victory with empty-net goals by Hull and Jim Pappin.

The two short-handed goals by Chicago marked the second time in as many National Hockey League championships that a team has scored twice while killing off one penalty.

Boston pulled off the trick against New York Rangers in the 1972 final during a 6-5 Bruins victory.

White surprised himself as well as the 17,600 Chicago Stadium fans with his scoring shot from a bad angle. He seemed to be well in check and made a move as if to round the Montreal net when he lifted the puck toward the front of the goal.

"I think it went between his arm and the post," said White.

Chicago's Len Frig, up from Dallas Black Hawks of the Central League and dressed initially as insurance in the event Jarrett was unable to play, saw a lot of action, particularly on the power play. He saved one certain goal by stopping a Frank Mahovlich shot on the goal line.

Montreal centre Henri Richard, in his 16th playoff season, set a career record with his 165th playoff game. Red Kelley had the previous record of 164 playoff game appearances in 19 seasons with Toronto Maple Leafs and Detroit Red Wings.

Racing: No Deception Regarding This Sham

The air-mail letter from Louisville said: "I have now lost money on the horses in five provinces and nine states."

It was from John Condon, now retired and a travelling tourist who just happens to be where he is "for the Derby — what else?"

If you haven't a hotel room, don't bother coming," he penned. "The closest I could get is 20 miles out of town."

Yes, it's derby time in Louisville, Kentucky. They call the track "Churchill Downs;" Any other week it might be like Sandown-by-the-Sea, in our terms, but on Derby Day it makes the single, biggest one-day score of any town or event in the United States.

The people at the track alone will bet about $7 million, that's the record, and the Off-Track Betting Corporation in New York will handle almost as much and already is taking bets.

But that's not all. The purists who go there will be tagged upwards of $50 for a room that normally would go for $15; a taxi ride is a fin; it's $3 to get into the track and standing room on the first turn goes for about $10. Penthouses and boxes are available, but not for long, at $100 or more.

A mint julep is the accepted sustenance. That's an ounce of bourbon and a sprig of weed that grows wild. The going price is $1.65, and you get to keep the glass (plastic). Something more exotic? You can buy a silver-plated drinking cup with the winner's name etched on it for $55, or a 14-karat loving cup for $500. Or how about a silver shot glass for $25?

Not Yet 'Super-Horse'

There will be 130,000 people somewhere inside the gates. Most of them will come early and stay late, and if you don't appreciate the $10 tab for breakfast, think of how many hot dogs it will take to feed that mob.

The race itself, though, is the attraction. This is the first of the so-called name events for the three-year-old crop at one mile and one quarter, and may the best horse win.

It doesn't always work out that way, and this year could also provide a surprise or two, especially if the field is a bulky one. That creates crowding and often an unfair test.

Right now, the experts are calling it a two-horse event with Secretariat, horse of the year in 1972, likely to be the post-time odds-on favorite, along with his entry mate, Angle Light.

They will run as one betting interest under trainer Lucien Laurin, and Canadians may feel they are a part of the event as Angle Light is owned by Edwin Whittaker of Toronto. Besides, Angle Light defeated Secretariat in the Wood Memorial this year, as did Sham, the Santa Anita Derby winner.

Which proves one thing: Secretariat, despite his fine record, isn't yet "super-horse."

A Runner, Not a Comic

Meanwhile, Sham is perhaps the solid one from a West Coast viewpoint, and generally regarded as Secretariat's chief rival.

Then, too, there is Our Native, the Flamingo winner. Tab his record. He has been first or second in seven of his nine starts this season. And in the vernacular, the leaders better not falter.

Like speed? Well, first out of the gate should be Shecky Greene, named for the comedian, but no joke when it comes to running shorter races. Shecky Greene won the Stepping Stone over seven furlongs in 1.23, and that's humming along. He was timed in 1:09 2-5 for the six furlongs, a tick off the track record.

Another with early foot is Royal and Regal, and with much pace evident, it should be a merry run to the first turn.

But is speed everything over a route? It all depends on the chase. If, for instance, Shecky Greene could romp off to a long lead without being challenged, which is highly unlikely, then the boy up could give him a breather down the back side and perhaps have something left for the drive.

Otherwise, the speed horses could burn each other out and the come-from behinder might find clear sailing in the stretch.

Which is as it will be; and for those who can't get to Kentucky and see for themselves, the winner just might be Sham, who could nip Secretariat and Our Native at the wire. With one proviso: If it comes up slop, put a deuce on Warbucks, and have one on me. The price will be right.

NEW SEASON OPENS FOR LAWN BOWLERS

Six Victoria-area lawn bowling clubs will be bustling with activity Saturday, five with official opening ceremonies and the other with a week of play already completed.

B.C. Lawn Bowling Association president Harry Thomas will officiate at the Beacon Hill greens, where Mrs. A. McKeachie, a long-time member of the ladies' club, will roll the first bowl to launch the new season at the Victoria Club.

Mayor Frances Elford will perform the honors for the Oak Bay opening at Carnarvon Park.

Victoria West Club at Victoria West Park, Canadian Pacific at the Crystal Garden and Lake Hill Club at Reynolds Park all have starts scheduled at the normal 2:00 p.m. draw time.

Former president Andy Stewart set a fine example for Burnside players at Hampton Park last week when he put his "official first bowl" right on the jack. Early growth and better than usual turf enabled the club to enjoy an extra week of play.

Jets Find Unlikely Stars

WINNIPEG (CP) — A speedy winger who missed most of the regular season with injuries, a pickup defenceman-turned-forward and the sentimental home town favorite sparked Winnipeg Jets to a 4-3 win Thursday night over New England Whalers.

The victory left Winnipeg trailing New England 2-1 in their best-of-seven World Hockey Association final series, which now moves into Boston for games Saturday and Sunday.

Playing coach Bobby Hull fired two goals, including the winner at 18:56 of the final period. The goal stopped a New England rally after the Whalers bounced back from a 3-0 deficit to tie the contest.

Other Winnipeg goal-getters were Ab McDonald and Danny Johnson.

New England replied with goals from defencemen Rick Ley and Ted Green and right-winger Tim Sheehy.

Hull knew something drastic had to be done to salvage a home-town win over the bigger, faster Whalers, and called on Garth Rizzutto, John Shmyr, a defenceman picked up for the playoffs, and Brian Cadle to start things rolling.

Cadle, perhaps the least likely Jet to gain the starting centreman's spot, was greeted with a tremendous roar from the crowd of 7,200 fans who made him their hero during the regular season.

It was the first playoff appearance for both Cadle, a lanky, hard-hitting bone-rack of about 165 pounds, and Shmyr.

Backed by Joe Aznussi and Larry Hornung on the Blueline, they immediately starting hitting and forechecking. Zanussi sent John French heavily into the boards and Hornung caught Larry Pleau solidly behind the Winnipeg net and the pattern was established.

"I made up that new line and they went out and set the tempo," said Hull after the game.

"We weren't winning with the combinations we had. They played well, all three of them."

KNICKS STOP WILT TO HANDLE LAKERS

LOS ANGELES — New York Knicks set a deliberate pace Thursday night and squared their National Basketball Association final at one win each.

Five New York players, headed by Bill Bradley with 26, reached double figures as the Knicks topped Lakers, 99-95. Only Jerry West and Jim McMillian could hit consistently for Lakers with the former scoring 32 points and the latter 26.

Knicks successfully used a strategy of fouling seven-foot-one Wilt Chamberlain before he could shoot on most occasions. Chamberlain sank only one free throw in nine attempts. He made only two field goals.

Third game of the best-of-seven final will be played in New York on Sunday.

Pirates Stage 'Oliver' Show

By The Canadian Press

Pittsburgh Pirates put on their version of "Oliver" in San Francisco and it was quite a production.

Al Oliver was a virtual one-man show with six RBI on two home runs as the Pirates brought the curtain down on the Giants in a National League baseball game 14-5 Thursday.

"Both homers were on fast balls . . . that was the first time I've had so many RBI in one game" said Oliver after hitting a two-run homer in the first inning and a grand slam blast in the Pirates' five-run second.

"The grand slam was on a 3-2 pitch and nine times out of 10, it's going to be a fast ball . . .so I was expecting it," said Oliver of the home run off San Francisco starter Jim Willoughby.

In other games Thursday, Cincinnati Reds defeated New York Mets 6-5; St. Louis Cardinals beat San Diego Padres 3-1 and Chicago Cubs whipped Los Angeles Dodgers 4-1.

No American League games were played.

With Oliver leading the longball offence, the Pirates put the game away early. Milt May had a three-run homer in Pittsburgh's four-run fourth that built their lead to 13-1.

Chicago took advantage of early power play opportunities Thursday for goals by Dennis Hull and Jean-Pierre Bordeleau. Short-handed goals a minute apart by defenceman Bill White and Mikita —both with Hull in the penalty box— pushed the Hawks into a 4-0 first-period lead.

John Marks got another power play goal early in the second period to make it 5-0.

Frank Mahovlich started a Montreal rally with his seventh goal of the playoff season in the second period and the Canadiens pulled to within one goal of the Hawks with third-period scores by Yvan Courneyer, Guy Lapointe and Jacques Lemaire.

The Canadiens threatened to tie the game up in the last few minutes but the Hawks held on and clinched the victory with empty-net goals by Hull and Jim Pappin.

The two short-handed goals by Chicago marked the second time in as many National Hockey League championships that a team has scored twice while killing off one penalty.

Boston pulled off the trick against New York Rangers in the 1972 final during a 6-5 Bruins victory.

White surprised himself as well as the 17,600 Chicago Stadium fans with his scoring shot from a bad angle. He seemed to be well in check and made a move as if to round the Montreal net when he lifted the puck toward the front of the goal.

"I think it went between his arm and the post," said White.

Chicago's Len Frig, up from Dallas Black Hawks of the Central League and dressed initially as insurance in the event Jarrett was unable to play, saw a lot of action, particularly on the power play. He saved one certain goal by stopping a Frank Mahovlich shot on the goal line.

Montreal centre Henri Richard, in his 16th playoff season, set a career record with his 165th playoff game. Red Kelley had the previous record of 164 playoff game appearances in 19 seasons with Toronto Maple Leafs and Detroit Red Wings.

OLYMPIC ACES BOLSTER DOLPHIN SWIM SQUAD

Two silver medal winners with the Canadian Olympic team at Munich last summer are scheduled for action at Crystal Pool this weekend as athletes from Alberta and Washington State compete with British Columbia splashers for honors in the second annual Victoria International swimming meet.

Members of Vancouver's powerful Canadian Dolphins Swimming Club, expected to play a dominant role in a scramble for awards in the three-day meet, have several stars on their roster, including Leslie Cliff and Bruce Robertson.

Miss Cliff, holder of national records in medley and butterfly events, finished second in the 400-metre individual medley at the Olympic Games.

Robertson, also a Canadian record-holder, collected a silver medal at Munich by taking the runner-up spot behind Mark Spitz in the 100-metre butterfly.

With several other noted performers slated to hit the water, new Canadian records should be threatened during the meet, which has drawn almost 250 entries from 25 clubs.

Competition begins Friday with a total of 12 heats in four events and continues at 11 a.m., Saturday, when some finals will start around 6:30 p.m.

Swimmers will get going on Sunday's events at 9 a.m. and start contesting finals around 3 p.m.

Secretariat Set for Shot At Rebuilding Reputation

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Secretariat, his reputation tarnished, will try to win the 99th and richest running of the Kentucky Derby Saturday and bring trainer Lucien Laurin and Meadow Stable their second straight victory in the Churchill Downs classic.

"Now bring on Saturday," Laurin, who won the 1972 Derby with Riva Ridge, said Thursday after entering Secretariat in this year's field of 13 three-year-olds thoroughbreds.

Secretariat, 1972 Horse of the Year, lost some prestige when he finished third, behind Angle Light and Sham, in the Wood Memorial after having scored impressive victories in his first two starts of the year.

Angle Light, owned by Ed Whittaker of Toronto, also was entered and will run as an entry with Secretariat because he also is trained by Laurin, a former Montreal jockey.

The entry was made the early even-money choice while Sigmund Sommer's Sham was second at 7-2. Pritchard, Thomas and Resseguet's Our Native was third at 8-1, followed by the Lou Goldfine-trained entry of Joe Kellman's Shecky Greene and Arthur Appleton's My Gallant at 10-1.

Others entered, and their odds, were Elkwood Stable's Restless Jet, 20-1; Ed Elzameyer's Warbucks, 15-1; Stevenson and Stump's Navajo, 30-1; Elmendorf Farm's Twice A Prince, 30-1; Aisco Stable's Royal and Regal, 15-1; Lazy F. Ranch's Forego, 12-1, and Gottdank and Sechrest's Gold Bag.

If all 13 start, each carrying 126 pounds, the 1¼-mile Derby will be worth $198,800, with $155,050 to the winner.

Post time is 2:40 p.m. PDT, and the forecast is sunny and mild weather. Television coverage will be from 2-3 p.m. on the CBC national network.

Secretariat will start from the No. 10 post under Ron Turcotte of Grand Falls, N.B., while John LeBlanc will send Angle Light out of the No. 2 slot.

In the Derby, Santa Anita Derby winner Sham will start from the No. 4 post position under Laffit Pincay Jr. and Flamingo winner Our Native carries Don Brumfield out of No. 7.

The fleet Shecky Greene will break from No. 11 and Blue Grass winner My Gallants will go from No. 12.

Baeza will ride My Gallant while no rider was named for Shecky Greene.

Other post positions and jockey assignments were Restless Jet, No. 1, Mike Hole; Warbucks, No. 3, Bill Hartack; Navajo, No. 5, Weston Soirez; Twice A Prince, No. 6, Angel Santiago; Royal and Regal, No. 8, Walter Blum; Forego, No. 9, Pete Anderson; Gold Bag, No. 13, Earle Fires.

Secretariat won seven of nine starts in 1972.

TERRIERS RUN PAST BRONCOS

PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE (CP) — Portage la Prairie Terriers capped a stunning series comeback Thursday with a 6-2 win over Penticton Broncos in the deciding game of the Western Canada Centennial Cup final.

The Terriers, who will host Pembroke Lumber Kings in the best-of-seven final starting Sunday, trailed Broncos three games to one before winning three straight.

Salmon, Trout Fishermen Facing Bright Prospects

Chances of coming home with a good catch from either a salmon or trout fishing expedition in Vancouver Island waters this weekend appear to be better than average.

Several limits of blueback salmon, which are grabbing bucktails, small spoons and flashtails, were reported to have been taken in the Finlayson arm end of Saanich Inlet.

Springs up to 25 pounds have also been landed in front of Goldstream Island.

"Hot" returns of large jacks, springs and a few blues are coming in from waters between Sheppard Point and Sandy Beach along the Bamberton shore.

Slightly smaller springs, averaging about nine pounds, are being boated in fairly deep waters off Coal Point and the Navy Buoys near Deep Cove. Other fishermen are finding good action off the far side of Sidney Spit.

The Gap is the best spot to try off Oak Bay for springs weighing as much as 20 pounds although a few have been landed near Trial Island. Try using 75 to 100 feet of line and super-strip or minnow.

Springs are moving right into Pedder Bay, where a 16-pounder was taken earlier this week close to the second orange cam buoy. The majority of returns, however, have been from along the kelp bed near Bentinck Island using minnows, herring or four-inch "polar bear" buzz-bombs.

★ ★ ★

The Becher Bay forecast reads "very good." Dave Wigmore landed a 32-pounder off Beechey Head last weekend after locating salmon at the 60-foot depth with a sounder.

Best time is right on the change of tide and the most productive rig consists of strip on the end of 100 feet of line with one and a half pounds of weight.

Otter Point and Secretary Island waters are yielding "pretty fair" returns of springs to fishermen using minnow or strip with 14 ounces of weight and 100 feet of line.

Farther up-Island, good catches of springs are coming in from Porlier Pass, Bold Bluff, Five Fingers Island, Winchelsea Island, Bellenas Islands, Northwest Bay, Rainy Bay, Yellow Rock and Bates Beach.

Blueback fishing is nothing short of fantastic in Menzies Bay, Quathiaski Cove and near the Red Buoy off Campbell River. Most successful lures incorporate either a pinkish or reddish color.

Trout anglers are enjoying the benefits of the warm weather and black ant hatches, which provide spectacular fishing if you happen to be on a lake or stream when one occurs, can be expected any day now.

Best returns on the Island have been from Shawnigan, Elk, Beaver, Dougan's, Westwood, Divers, Dixon, Lowery, McLachlin, Sproat, Roberts, Lower Campbell and Middle Quinsam lakes.

In addition, Cusheon Lake on Salt Spring Island is beginning to yield some good catches of cutthroat trout.

NIBBLES: Aircraft patrols by the fish and wildlife branch appeared to be paying off in the Prince George region . . . Routine air patrols of Tweedsmuir Park and vicinity turned up two incidents of hunting moose and caribou by the use of aircraft . . . Successful prosecution and conviction of four people followed . . . Control of this illegal use of aircraft was extremely difficult prior to the time branch officers also took to the air.

Further news on those Canada geese transplanted by the branch to the Nimpkish Valley . . . As previously stated in this space, 10 of the 1971 transplants wintered at Sointula . . . Other birds apparently spent winter on the west coast of the Island near Espinosa Inlet and five turned up at Astoria, Ore.

At 6:30 p.m., CFB Esquimalt faces Labatts at Heywood and Sooke Merchants tangle with Six Mile House at Sooke Park.

TEAMSTERS NIP RIVALS

Rick Lapointe scored his third goal of the game with less than a minute left to play Thursday night to give Esquimalt Teamsters a 12-11 nod over Saanich Charman Pacific Realty in a Vancouver Island Intermediate "A" Lacrosse League game at Pearkes Arena.

Darrell Deane also scored three goals for Teamsters while Steve Bowack scored two goals and had two assists for Realty.

Stu Rhodes, Pete McCreesh and Murray McLaren scored four goals each to lead UCT, which allowed Peninsula only five shots on goal.

Saanich UCT Midgets, a team of 15 and 16-year-olds who were refused permission to enter the "A" loop, bulldozed Peninsula of Central Saanich 35-0 in a Vancouver Island Intermediate "B" League game at Centennial Park.

NURSERIES WINS

Cedar Hill Nurseries downed Big Barn Market 5-3 in a Cosmopolitan Babe Ruth League baseball game Thursday night.

Cool Style Helps Mike Avoid 'Funny Numbers'

HOUSTON (AP) — "You've got to keep your cool."

Mike Hill, a one-time beer truck driver, was talking about his mastery of the bumpy greens on the 6,905-yard Quail Valley Golf Club course.

"If you get hot and let these greens get under your skin, well, you're going to shoot some funny numbers.

"You've got to keep your cool, have patience. You've got to reconcile yourself to missing some short putts, take it in stride and figure that everyone else is going to do the same thing."

The 34-year-old Hill followed that difficult formula to a hard-won 67 and the first-round lead Thursday in the $205,000 Houston Open golf tournament.

His five-under-par effort gave him a two-stroke margin over Steve Melnyk and amateur Ben Crenshaw, tied at 69.

The group at 70 consisted of Dave Stockton, Pete Brown, George Johnson, Butch Baird and Billy Ziobro.

Scores were relatively high despite good playing conditions—warm sunshine and light winds. Masters champ Tommy Aaron, for example, had an 80, and Tom Weiskopf a 79. Dave Hill, Mike's controversial older brother, had a 78 and said he was going to withdraw.

Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg had a 75 and Ben Kern of Toronto shot 79.

Most of the trouble was on the greens, made patchy, spotty and bumpy by a wet winter.

Winning at the Races May Not Be Your Idea of Fun, But...

Here I sit, trying to write about Larry Voegele. And all the while I'm working and sweating, the guy I'm writing about is out at the racetrack. Not a worry in the world—and probably making more money in a day than I make in a week. What's his secret? He knows how to beat the races. Really knows. Knows so much that he runs a school for handicappers. (It's the only one of its kind in the world. Which is why he was asked to appear on "What's My Line,")

He charges his "students" two hundred bucks apiece. He tells them if they're not completely satisfied he'll return every cent they've paid, and nobody has ever asked for his money back. What's more, he went on a live radio show (The Pete Smith Show on KMPC, February 20, 1971) and did something that had never been done before. Mr. Smith really threw it to him: asked him to pick the winners in the 7 races that were being run at Santa Anita, while the program was on the air. Two out of seven would have been good enough to show a profit. Three would have been phenomenal. Larry Voegele picked five!

If he'd been at the track betting, say $20 on each race, he would have picked up a cool $404 . . . net profit! Not bad for an afternoon's "work."

And all the knowledge that Larry publicly proved that day . . . every fact that he teaches in his $200 course . . . is in his book. If you've never bet on a horse in your life, you'll read and enjoy every word. And understand more than most guys who have been following the ponies all their lives.

If you're an oldtimer, you'll skip the background and get right down to the nitty gritty. If you can forget what you think you know, if you have the nerve—and the discipline—to follow his methods to the letter, you could make more money than you ever dreamed possible.

Why? Because you'll know more than 95% of the people who go to the track—and you're betting against them! The money they lose, you'll win! The track and the state take their cut, but there's plenty to go around.

At Santa Anita, for example, over two million dollars is bet every day. And it's a statistical fact that only one out of 20 walks out a big winner. You can be one of them!

Larry Voegele doesn't look like a racetrack tout. He's not. He's a college graduate. He was editor of a newspaper. He was a legislative assistant to a congressman.

He was a stockbroker, working for a major Wall Street firm. Was because he found out that investing in horse races was safer—and more profitable—than trying to beat the Bulls and the Bears at their own game.

And that's the secret of his book. He approaches handicapping as a professional. It's scientific. No "hunches." No "tips." No so-called "systems." It isn't even "inside information." Just simple, hard facts. Facts that anyone could see if they knew what to look for. In short, if they knew what Larry Voegele knows—and tells in his book. It'll take you about an hour to read it. Another hour to practice what he preaches.

Then if you do exactly as he says, step by step . . . if you don't get reckless or greedy . . . you'll be on your way to the kind of life you want.

Is that worth a 2-hour investment? Because that's all you're risking. Just time. Not money. Here's why: your check or money order will not be deposited for thirty-one days after your copy of the book is mailed. That'll give you plenty of time to receive your book, read it thoroughly, and put the principles into action.

If you're not thrilled with what you've gained, just send the book back within 31 days. Your uncashed check or money order will be in the return mail!

Ever heard of an offer like that? No. But there's never been a book like this either.

As to the price—if you decide to keep the book. Frankly, we didn't know what to charge. It isn't just paper and ink. It's information. Facts that dozens of people have paid $200 to gain—and were satisfied to pay.

But there aren't many people who can afford that kind of money. Even for a sure thing.

So what do you think about 10 dollars? That's all—10 dollars. And you have something better than a money back guarantee. Because your check or money order won't even be cashed unless—and until—you decide to keep the book because it's worth a lot more.

Winning at the horse races, traveling first class and living in the best hotels may not be your idea of fun. As for me, I think it sure beats working for a living. See you at the track.

Memories of Mighty Clipper Sailing Ships

The top sailing skippers of the world are setting their sights on a race being planned for 1975.

Beginning in London the blue riband international race will retrace the routes of the old clipper ships between there and Australia.

Part of the 250th anniversary of the Royal Thames Yacht Club and 50th anniversary festivities of the Royal Ocean Racing Club, the race is being organized by the Financial Times.

The yachts will be out to beat the fastest times set by such mighty ships as the Cutty Sark and Patriarch.

The Cape of Good Hope will be rounded on the outward leg to Sydney and Cape Horn on the homeward stretch.

Record-holder Patriarch did the run to Australia in 67 days, taking 69 on her return trip. For may years before that record was set, Cutty Sark was clipper champion with a 72-day run out and a 73-day run back.

AROUND OUR SHORES

By Pat Dufour

The sailing season gets under way at Munro Head Sunday with the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, combining a certain amount of pomp and ceremony with some down-to-earth racing.

A flag-raising ceremony takes place at 1:30 p.m., followed by a sail past with Capt. G. H. Hayes, CFB Esquimalt's new base commander, taking the salute aboard Tommy Tucker's Duncan Scott.

Once they've paid their respects, crews aboard Sailerettes and cruising class boats will get down to business, racing for Cock of the Walk and Top Dog pennants.

★ ★ ★

Royal Victoria Yacht Club members have a packed weekend ahead of them.

Starting at 5 p.m. Saturday boats equipped for ocean racing will begin a 48-mile overnighter, halfway mark being Crescent Rock in the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

Other boats will have their own race Sunday, the course being from Cadboro Bay around Trial Island and back. Start time is 2 p.m.

This is an invitational race for category IV cruising boats, Thunderbirds, Cal 20s and dinghies.

★ ★ ★

The second Wednesday night series session starts at 6:30 p.m. next week. This week's winners were:

Cal 20s, Dick Readshaw's Massilia, followed by Michael Smith's Kittiwake, Don North's Pegasus and Win Life's Semiramis.

Top three Thunderbirds were Bob Grundison's Owl, Den Perry's Tahola and Ed Cushing's Shamrock. Doug Taylor Lee won in Fireballs. First and second in the Laser fleet were Dennis Woodward and Colin Huggett.

Any boat, whether her owner belongs to a club or not, can take part in the Tuesday night series that start at 7 p.m. in waters off Oak Bay Marina. If you want to try racing for the first time give George Pearkes a ring at 384-3858 and he'll tell you how to get in on the action.

Jack Smith's Island Challenger was the over-all winner Sunday when 36 Canoe Bay Sailing Club boats competed in a race from Sidney to Russell Island and back.

Next after her were Peter White's White Squall, Ken Martin's Georgia Girl, Denny Davis' Rozinante, Bud Peetz's Saki, Gordie Inglis' Water Melon, Will Jensen's modified Spencer 31 Tiara (sailing her maiden race), Geoff Greenhalgh's Yoyo, Dave Thomas's Mary Bower and Karel Drost's Makima.

RVYC also had a long-distance race Sunday. In International Offshore Rule class it was Miles Dighton's Obsession in lead spot with Guy Morgan's Screech behind her.

Top three boats racing under the Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet handicap were Frank Rhodes, Ouzo, Bob Hosie's Triad and Tom Loney's Bacarra.

Owl was top Thunderbird and first three Cal 20s were Pegasus, Kittiwake and Massilia.

★ ★ ★

Jack Smith's Senga of RVYC won the trophy for the first Vancouver Island boat in last weekend's Strait of Georgia predicted log race.

She may yet win the whole thing. She came third. The other two boats ahead of her, John Murray's Wakalla and R. Phillips' Illikai, have had protests lodged against them. These are yet to be heard but if they're upheld Senga will be top boat.

She finished with a percentage error of .737 per cent, compared to Wakalla's .504 per cent.

Navigation skills reached a new high this year with all of the first 10 boats making it with less than one per cent errors.

CTV's Harvey Kirck (right) will narrate the opening segment of a new series that explores the universal and bloody disease of nationalism called, Window on the World, Nationalism: The Fanatic Heart, airing on Tuesday, May 8 at 10 p.m. on Channel 8. The rebel soldiers of the American South during the Civil War, the Irish insurgents of 1916 and the storm troopers of the Third Reich provide the background for this study in nationalism.

CABLE 10 HOSTS GALLERY TELETHON

The Victoria Art Gallery has the largest membership per capita of any art gallery in Canada and, in its permanent possession, the finest collection of Japanese art in the country.

However, despite some federal and municipal grants, the cost of maintenance, salaries, acquisitions and proposed expansion has pushed the galleries' budget to the limit and they are, for the first time, asking the public for financial support.

To head the fund-raising drive, the gallery is holding a six-hour telethon on Cable 10, on Friday, May 11, to raise public funds in aid of its continuing operation.

Promising to be more than just a request for help, the Gallery Lines Show (as the telethon will be called) will feature guests gleaned from Victoria's abundant artistic community together with taped segments by various local entertainers.

Many of the writers, poets, musicians, photographers and painters will be interviewed separately, but some will join in a panel to discuss the creative problems and opportunities in the communities.

Women in the Arts will be one such panel that will include P. K. Page (Mrs. A. Irwin), noted poet and painter; Alice Munro, successful Canadian author now living in Victoria, and Dorothy Livesay, internationally-known Canadian poet and instructor at the University of Victoria.

The currently successful rock star Valdy will be featured both on tape and in panel discussion together with songwriter Gipp Foster, and singer Tom Middleton.

Photography will form the basis for another panel that will include Gray Campbell, the B.C. publisher who has just recently published a beautiful book of exquisitely photographed wildflowers, and Michael Rougier, award-winning ex-photographer of Life magazine. Slides of the book will be shown and many of Rougier's exciting experiences with Life will be discussed.

Although fund-raising is the main purpose of the telethon, the Gallery Lines Show hopes to make Victorians aware of its continuing program of musical concerts, poetry readings, drama presentations by the Gallery Players and its successful picture-loan service.

The Enemy Below (xxx), on 7 at 3:30. An interesting Second World War drama in which an American destroyer and a German U-boat play cat and mouse in the Atlantic. Excellent photography and a good cast (Robert Mitchum and Curt Jurgens) make this 1957 war drama better-than-average.

Houdini (xxx), on 11 at 8. (See Monday movies, same time and channel for details of this film.)

The Key (xxx), on 13 at 8. A 1958 psychological drama set in Second World War London, focusing on the relationship of two close friends with the same beautiful woman, starring William Holden, Trevor Howard and Sophia Loren.

The War Wagon (xxx), on 7 at 9. Action-paced 1967 western drama about a plot to hold up an armor-plated wagon transporting a fortune in gold dust starring John Wayne, Kirk Douglas and Howard Keel.

Nine Hours to Rama (xxx), on 12 at 9. An absorbing well-mounted political drama that re-creates the events leading up to Mahatma Gandhi's assassination starring Horst Bucholz, Jose Ferrer and J. S. Casshyap playing and looking remarkably like Gandhi.

Elizabeth the Queen (xxx), on 13 at 10. Oscar nominations went to this 1939 historical drama about the romance between Queen Elizabeth and the youthful Essex starring Bette Davis, Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland.

Portrait of a Sinner (xx), on 11 at 11. An unsavory 1959 drama about a young man who leaves his fiancee after he becomes involved with a callous temptress starring Najda Tiller, Tony Britton and William Bendix.

This Above All (xxx), on 12 at 11:35. Excellent 1942 adaptation of Eric Knight's novel about the romance between a disillusioned British soldier and a patriotic young woman starring Tyrone Power and Joan Fontaine.

The Curse of the Fly (xx), on 8 at midnight. Brian Donlevy and Carole Gray star in this 1966 thriller about scientists who turn people into monsters.

Better a Widow (xx), on 13 at midnight. An offbeat Italian-made 1968 comedy-drama about a British engineer and a blonde beauty caught between battling Mediterranean industrialists starring Peter McEnery and Virna Lisi.

Cannon Enjoys 'Hero' Image

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES — William Conrad carries a big load on television.

Cannon is the only weekly show with just one star and no regular players to help bear the burden. It can be facetiously argued that the 260-pound Conrad more than makes up for the lack of such help.

On the CBS show, Conrad has no secretary, no pal in the police, no girl friend, no one.

"I have seen too many shows ruined by having the hero's image divided too many ways," he said. "There's not enough of the hero in any one man. But it's rough on me.

"I'm in practically every shot. "I worked from the first of June to the middle of February without a day off. When we were on location I worked Saturdays too. Our days were long — 12 hours."

WILLIAM CONRAD . . . "Cannon"

Conrad says he isn't complaining.

"If I worked an eight-hour day, I'd feel I'd hardly worked."

But he has turned down several offers to co-star in films.

"I want to rest when the nine months are over," he said.

"And you get to the point financially where it doesn't matter."

SHOW IS HIT

Cannon, ending its second year, has been a financial success. Its high position in the ratings assures Conrad of more years of steady employment.

Conrad, 51, has given the fat man a new image.

He comes across as tough, active, and with a masculine virility only slightly layered in fat. He is an ardent fisherman and often sails his 47-foot ketch, Moonraker.

Other than radio, where he was Marshall Matt Dillon on Gunsmoke for 11 years in pre-television days, Conrad had never had a starring role.

"I played a lot of heavies and the leading man's best friend, which is the dullest part in the world," he said.

"They're beginning to broaden the viewpoint as to who can play lead roles," he added.

"You no longer have to be seven feet tall and handsome. I was delighted to see Telly Savalas signed for Cojack. And look at Buddy Ebsen in Barnaby Jones.

"The whole concept of the leading man has changed. I think it's wrong to bring up a generation believing that only beautiful people can do things. It doesn't happen that way."

Conrad actually added 25 to 30 pounds since beginning Cannon.

His role in Cannon ended a retirement from acting that lasted nearly 20 years. In the early 1950s, when radio faded, he did a few parts in television, then became a producer and director. But his voice was often on the tube. He did the voice-overs for thousands of commercials and actually earned twice as much from them as he did from producing and directing.

He also narrated such shows as Bullwinkle and The Fugitive. The association with the latter show, plus several appearances as a guest star on television, led to Cannon.

Channel 9 Telethon a Two-Way Success

KCTS-9's first annual membership week was a two-way success. The drive achieved it's primary goal of doubling Channel 9's membership (now 10,000) and adding badly needed financial support in excess of $70,000 in pledges. It also achieved a second important aim: demonstrating the large amount of community support for public television in the Pacific Northwest.

Since pledged donations are still arriving at Channel 9, there are no exact figures on how much money will be finally received. However, the final night's pledges indicated that over 5,000 people had pledged $15 or more, doubling the number of Channel 9 members. Since KCTS had it's first fund-raising night, Oct. 1, 1972, audience response has continually grown. Each pledge night has brought in tremendous amounts of financial aid and viewer support.

For it's first annual membership week, April 1 to 8, KCTS-9 put together a unique format. The finest public domain Charlie Chaplin comedies were presented with epilogue discussions by Herb Graf, well known New York film critic. Between films and epilogues, civic personalities appeared in Channel 9 studios to discuss current issues, community activities and public television.

But, the most important thing about membership week was not activities and interviews: it was raising badly needed money for KCTS-9. The funds which Channel 9 will realize, once all pledges come in, will be used for two major purposes. First, the money will allow the station to remain on the air Saturdays and Sundays, days for which Channel 9 is not currently funded. The cost of broadcasting for a weekend amounts to about $3,500. Second, KCTS will be donated money to expedite grants which have been awarded the station, but which require matching funds to be raised in the community. As an impressive example, the HEW grant of $359,000 which will assist KCTS-9 to achieve color capability and programming flexibility requires that Channel 9 raise $119,000 locally. Viewer support will help Channel 9 become a full-time, all color, completely flexible broadcasting operation. The rich, diverse programming of Channel 9 deserves no less.

Membership week was an effective, fun-filled, entertaining and useful activity for both KCTS-9 and its viewers. The first annual membership week showed that Channel 9 can count on their viewers to support public television, and aid the station in its fund-raising work. In turn, KCTS-9 showed that; while fund-raising has become a necessary part of public television, it can be a novel as well as a practical way to raise money and memberships. Channel 9 would like to thank all who had a hand in the successful campaign.

Wednesday

Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet (xxxx), on 4 at 9:30. A well-made 1940 biography of the man who discovered the first cure for syphilis and forced the medical profession to take notice of it as a disease. Edward G. Robinson is superb as the doctor and Ruth Gordon matches him every step of the way as his wife.

The Suspect (xxx), on 13 at 10.30. A well-acted suspenseful 1945 drama about a middle-aged man married to a shrew who falls in love with a younger woman and plots to do away with his wife. An excellent cast includes Charles Laughton and Ella Raines.

Valentino (xx), on 13 at noon. A romanticized version of the Valentino legend elaborately produced against a background of gaudy splendor of the early Hollywood days. Starring in this 1951 biography are Anthony Dexter, Eleanor Parker and Richard Carlson.

Ransom For a Dead Man (xxx), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. This 1971 crime-drama about a police lieutenant (Peter Falk) vs. a woman lawyer (Lee Grant) who killed her husband served as the pilot for the now successful series, Columbo.

Last Train From Gun Hill (xxx), on 5 at 3:30. A good cast (Kirk Douglas, Anthony Quinn and Carolyn Jones) highlights this better-than-average 1959 western drama about a U.S. marshall who tracks down the men who murdered his wife.

Lonely Are the Brave (xxx), on 7 at 3:30. An unusual 1962 western drama which lends tragic significance to the heroic figure of the American cowboy as a man out of his time element, starring Kirk Douglas and Walter Matthau.

Houdini (xxx), on 11 at 8. Entertaining biography of the life and time of famed magician and escape artist Harry Houdini, starring Tony Curtis and Janet Leigh.

From Here to Eternity (xxxx), on 13 at 8. Excellent 1953 adaptation of the James Jones best-seller about life in a Honolulu army post just before the attack on Pearl Harbor. A superb cast includes Burt Lancaster, Montgomery Clift, Deborah Kerr, Donna Reed, and Frank Sinatra (Miss Reed and Sinatra won Oscars for best supporting performances).

Hawaii Five-O (xxx), on 7 and 12 at 11:30. This 1968 film starring Jack Lord served as the pilot for the now successful TV series and has Steve McGarrett out to find the killer of a close friend. Supporting cast includes Nancy Kwan, Leslie Nielson, Lew Ayres and Krigh Dhiegh as Wo Fat.

Seventeen (xxx), on 2 at 11:50. A well-played modern (1940) version of Booth Tarkington's story of a teen-age boy's crush on a new girl in town starring Jackie Cooper and Betty Field.

The Greatest Show On Earth (xxxx), on 6 and 8 at midnight. This 1952 Cecil B. DeMille spectacular circus drama won an Oscar as best picture of the year and stars Betty Hutton, Cornel Wilde, Charlton Heston, Dorothy Lamour, Gloria Grahame and James Stewart.

He Left Job for Art, and Loves It

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Can you serve two masters?

Local watercolor artist Brian Travers-Smith doesn't think so.

This spring he resigned his job as trust consultant with Canada Trust to become a full-time artist.

He explains: "There's not enough hours in a day to do this (paint) on a part-time basis. I've reached the age of 41 and if I'm ever going to do it I have to start now. Security is not everything in life."

But it does count when, like Travers-Smith, you have a wife, a teenage daughter and two younger sons to support.

"I have saved some money," he explains, "and if I hadn't felt I could make it I would never have taken the chance with the family so young."

Although he only began painting seriously 13 years ago, his paintings, somewhere in the range of 1,000, have found their was into homes all over the world — Argentine, Peru, Germany, Paris, the Middle East and all parts of the United States.

A high percentage of them hang in Victoria business offices and homes — easily distinguishable by his masterly style and love of the outdoors.

Travers-Smith explains "I've always been completely fascinated by the effects of weather, atmospherics, boats and natural things."

The delicate precision of some of his works may be the reason that some of his admirers suspect a touch of the Orient in his paintings.

Travers-Smith says he doesn't see it — at least, not often — but it could be the effect of having been born in China, spending time in a Japanese prison camp, before coming to Canada with his parents when he was 15.

Although it is only weeks since he made his big decision he says he already feels 10 years younger.

"Trying to run two careers in a 24-hour day was pretty grim. I had to decide whether I would ever follow my principal interest and desire — to go as far as I can with watercolor and other mediums if I find I'm interested.

"My temper has improved, my state of health is far better, I feel 10 years younger."

Another reason for his decision was the desire to spend more time with his family.

"In some ways, being an artist is no different than acting as a trust consultant. It takes planning, just like organizing people's estates.

"You have to sit down, think things through, decide what you want the end result to be and how you'll get it."

EVEN GM DEALER AVOIDS FIRENZAS

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The General Motors dealer in this cenral B.C. city has refused to accept Firenza automobiles in trade. The controversial car is made by a subsidiary of GM.

E. R. schultz, president of Schultz Pontiac-Buick, said he won't accept any more Firenzas until the present back-log of six of the automobiles is sold.

General Motors has stopped marketing the imported cars in Canada.

Toronto Girl In Satan Slaying

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (CP) — A teen-aged Toronto girl was among six young persons, described by police as beach transients, being held today in the slaying of a 17-year-old change boy in a pinball arcade.

The youth, Ross Michael Cochran, was described by officers as having been strapped to a table and tortured for a day before he was killed. He had been flogged with chains and stabbed with cut glass while tied to a black wooden table in the basement of a ramshackle rooming house.

The six held, all charged with first-degree murder, were identified by police as Kenneth M. Francis, 17; Charles M. Paige, 21; John Colbert, 18; Deborah Ann Shook, 22; Howard Waellus, 19, all Americans, and Cindy Black of Toronto, whose age was given as either 17 or 15.

Police did not disclose when Miss Black arrived in Daytona Beach or how she met the others, described by police as members of a devil's coven and Satan worshippers.

'PLACE OF LEWDNESS'

Young Cochran, who came here from Fresno, Calif., was a state witness in a suit to close a private school here described as a "place of lewdness."

"They must have hated this kid like hell because they really tortured him," said Police Chief Robert Palmer Thursday.

Cochran's body was found mangled, trussed with ropes in a remote wooden area 15 miles southeast of Daytona Beach. Whether he died at the spot where the body was found or on the table, termed by police a sacrificial altar, in the rooming house was not known.

Police said Cochran had talked freely of being a narcotics agent and they said his activities may have angered his slayers.

In Toronto, Miss Black's father said she had not been even remotely interested in witchcraft.

He said she left home three weeks ago.

Once before, he said, she had been away from home for a week and was brought back from Niagara Falls, Ont., by police.

SEX RING USED BOYS AGE 10-15

RIVERHEAD, N.Y. (CP-AP) — Eight men, including a Brampton, Ont., college instructor and a United Kingdom child psychologist, are under indictment in connection with the operation on Long Island of an "international homosexual ring" which used 15 boys between the ages of 10 and 15.

Each of the eight was charged Thursday with 19 counts of sodomy, seven counts of sexual abuse and one of conspiracy. Four pleaded not guilty, one was arrested in Puerto Rico and three others are at large.

One of the accused is Leslie McGraw, an English instructor at Sheridan College in Brampton, Ont. He is among those still at large and believed to be in Europe.

The indictment also named Morris Fraser, 39, a child psychologist associated with the Royal Belfast Hospital for Exceptional Children in Northern Ireland.

'Old Man Ontario' Dies; Leslie Frost Was 77

LINDSAY, Ont. (CP) — Leslie Miscampbell Frost, former Progressive Conservative premier of Ontario, died today. He was 77 and held the premiership longer than any other.

The former premier, who retired from office 12 years ago, was reported in extremely serious condition 10 days ago and relatives and friends were prepared for his death.

At Quun's Park, Ontario's legislative centre where Frost had served as premier between 1949 and 1961, the house was adjourned early after hearing the news of Frost's death.

Premier William Davis described Frost in a statement as "a personal friend and mentor for many years and a man who will rank as one of the giants in Canadian political history."

Davis announced the house also will not sit on the day of Frost's funeral, expected to be Monday or Tuesday.

"Old Man Ontario," as Frost once described himself, first was elected to the legislature in 1937 as a Conservative. He served as treasurer and mines minister before becoming premier in 1949.

Frost, member for Victoria-Haliburton riding, decided to retire as premier in 1961 at the age of 66 and was succeeded by John Robarts.

Following his 1961 retirement, Frost made only rare public appearances although until recently he occasionally visited his law office, established here in 1921.

His wife, the former Gertrude Carew, whom he married in 1926, died in 1970.

After he retired, the former premier spent much of his time in historical research. In 1967, his book, Fighting Men, was published by Clarke Irwin.

CDC Heads Split On Western Base

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Directors of the Canada Development Corporation apparently are divided on East-West lines over the proposal to move their head office to Vancouver.

The numbers are overwhelmingly on the side of the Easterners. But the Western directors have, for the time being at least, a strong ally in the form of the federal government.

The trick seems to be to bring the proposed move to a vote before public shareholders — a majority can be expected to be from Eastern Canada — can out-vote the government, now the one and only shareholder of the corporation.

In November of 1971, Prime Minister Trudeau announced that it is the government's wish that the CDC head office, now in Ottawa, be moved to Vancouver within two years. The CDC was set up to encourage Canadians to invest in Canadian enterprises.

But in spite of this declaration by the prime minister, the matter has not been dealt with formally by the directors. And on Monday, CDC Chairman Anthony Hampson, who comes from Montreal, said that the directors are not obliged to accede to Trudeau's wishes.

The question will be voted on before the end of the year, he said, and their decision will have to be ratified by the shareholders, whoever they may be by then.

Hampson pointed out that although the government is the only shareholder at present, the legislation setting up the corporation provides that up to 90 per cent of CDC shares may be held by the public. He said shares could be offered to the public before the end of the year when directors deal with the proposal to move to the West Coast.

Hugh Martin, president of Western Construction and Engineering Research of Vancouver, the only B.C. representative on the 21-member board of directors, said Wednesday that there are many directors — and CDC management personnel — who feel the move to Vancouver would be an inconvenience.

But there are far too many head offices in Montreal and Toronto. "It would be a very healthy thing if the CDC had a Western base," he said.

Martin also said that the directors were aware of Trudeau's wish that the CDC move to Vancouver when the corporation was established.

"I think it would be rather presumptuous of them to presume that when the prime minister makes a statement, he doesn't mean it," he declared.

China Drops Instant MD System

SHANGHAI (CP) — Attempts to speed the production of doctors in China by drastically reducing schooling and drawing on the semi-educated worker has largely failed, visiting Canadian doctors say.

Attempts following the upheaval of the cultural revolution in the late 1960s to reduce medical schooling to two years or less from five have been partly abandoned, the visitors learned in a visit to the Second Shanghai Medical College and from conversations.

A two-year post-secondary course designed to turn out full-fledged doctors has been replaced by a course of 3½ years. The standard in Canada is four years to MD degree plus internship and further years for specialization.

The shift is assessed as an indication that the revolution's stringent admonition to turn out more university graduates with less time-wasting theory is being relaxed, probably in other fields such as engineering as well as medicine.

Emphasis of the cultural revolution between 1965 and 1969 was to break down development of a cultural elite, cut out educational frills, correct the trend towards alienation of professional recruiting from among workers, peasants and soldiers; to stress practical work in service to the people instead of theory, and to deliver medical care to the countryside where 80 per cent of the population lives instead of concentrating it in the city.

Indications from answers at the medical college were that the interpretation of that dictum may have been too strict because medical students were being deprived of sufficient basic scientific training to develop as doctors, the Canadian doctors say.

Cultural revolution provoked a hiatus that kept universities closed for several years and they only recently resumed operations on a limited scale.

A professor said that the motivation of the one-year students is high but their background education varies and that is causing difficulties.

BRANDT STANDS FIRM

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Nixon and West German Chancellor Willy Brandt agreed Wednesday that the United States and the nine nation European Community must seek "a comprehensive Atlantic partnership among equals."

This pledge represents acknowledgment that the United States will be bargaining with a stronger body, Western Europe as an entity, rather than with individual nations, in the tough negotiations ahead in the so-called "Year of Europe."

Brandt was even more blunt later. He said:

"The position of the West cannot be determined by the policy of one country, it must be determined by a common policy."

TOYS LIKE TEDDY undergo close scrutiny and testing before getting the official federal government approval, but parents should help in making sure toys amuse and are not misused.

Harmless Looking Toy Can Be Health Threat

All toys aren't safe for all children.

A harmless looking plush teddy bear with a twinkle in his eyes could be a threat to a child's health.

Parents in Greater Victoria are asked during Child Safety Week to check carefully before buying toys.

Although the greatest number of injuries are caused by bicycles, sleds and wagons, there are other dangers from toys including irritating chemicals.

A small child could choke on a loose part of a toy or be exposed to sharp points or edges.

The federal department of consumer and corporate affairs reports that children between two and three years old are the main victims. They are injured by toys more than any other age group. Boys get hurt most.

Parents should use special care in toy selection, especially where there are small children in the house because they are liable to put anything in their mouths.

Points to remember:

—Buy the toy that is right for the child's age and know-how.

—Keep in mind who else in the house might play with the toy.

—Check instructions and really look the toy over.

—Show the child how the toy should be used so that it brings joy, not harm.

—Indoor toys shouldn't be kept outdoors overnight.

Food Firms Gear Tests To Market

TORONTO (CP) — Big food manufacturing firms maintain eleborate research laboratories for a lot of reasons.

They are part of quality control programs. They can check products when there has been a consumer complaint. They test for taste. Shelf life tests are looming large now as federal legislation requiring use dating comes closer.

The labs are looking constantly for new products, improved processes, ways to use familiar raw materials, to increase profits or cut costs.

And they are used to analyse products in the light of concern over additives, nutrition, mercury traces from the environment, the effect of plant waste on the environment.

Dr. Leon Rubin, director of research at Canada Packers, said the emphasis in the laboratories changes as the market changes and technology changes.

"There has been a tremendous change in the operation of a packing house since the 1950s. For instance, weiners used to be a hand operation, now they're done pretty well continuously by machine. With roughly the same production, it took 80 people to produce the weiners, now it takes about 12."

The hot dog is one of several foods researched with a new focus now because of the current interest in nutrition.

Assistant director Ralph Witty said: "With an emphasis on nutrition, we're asked to alter raw materials to provide increased nutrition. Medical evidence changes all the time, and consumers want different things.

"We've added liver to weiners and tasted them to find out at what point you can taste the liver, which a lot of people don't like.

"We'd love to develop a high protein snack, but the texture, flavor, stability would have to be similar to what's on the market now, or people wouldn't buy it.

"The nutritional problem with snack foods now is the raw material. They are mostly corn, and that's deficient in animo acids.

"Animo acids make up protein, and if one is missing, the total effect of the protein is completely missing. In the case of the snack foods, that means there is no food value in them, only calories."

When they do develop or change a product, they not only test it on a panel of people trained to describe tasts, they machine test it. They can measure the "bite", the crunch of a hot dog as well as factors such as how much loss it takes in cooking.

Witty said opinion on additives of all kinds changes as technology develops ways to test for traces.

"One of the reasons DES was taken off the market is that in two years they have learned to detect it in minute parts per billion rather than per million."

DES is a growth hormone injected into cattle to make them grow faster. Its use has been outlawed in Canada because of a possibility it might cause cancer.

Rubin said their lab works with information from other research resources and vice versa, and one of their important functions is to develop methods to detect and combat threats to health that involve their industry.

He said they are trying to manufacture a phosphate-free industrial detergent and are looking for new ways to tan leather because the traditional way produces pollutants.

"We use lime and sulphide to remove hair, which produces a highly polluting effluent. We hope that if we can ever develop an enzymic agent, it could be treated as ordinary sewage. That might help the smell near the plant, too."

He said the work is active enough that they have taken out patents on it. He acknowledges that they are happiest when research can combine potential profit with public benefit.

EQUAL PAY LAW HARD TO PRESS

TORONTO (CP) — The federal government's equal pay legislation has been difficult to enforce because women who are discriminated against by employers are reluctant to complain for fear of further discrimination, according to Labor Minister John Munro.

He said revisions to the Canada Labor Code, designed to correct such discrimination, will be introduced within "two or three months."

Munro told a human relations conference sponsored by the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews that the amendment "should give the code more teeth in the area of sex, marital status and age."

A similar bill was introduced last year, but was not passed before the Oct. 30 election. The code prohibits job discrimination on the basis of sex.

Munro said in an interview that the new bill will include "more severe" penalties for violations than the present code, which provides for a maximum fine of $100 against an individual and $500 against a corporation or union.

The code covers about 55,000 workers under federal jurisdiction, including employees of banks and railways.

Indian Plea: 'Jobs or Husbands'

BOMBAY (CP) — The small town of Jorhat in India's northeastern Assam State recently witnessed what newspapers described as "an interesting but disturbing" demonstration.

Hundreds of women paraded the streets of Jorhat demanding jobs. One of the colorful cloth banners proclaimed: "If we can't get jobs, let's at least get husbands."

Anupama Das, one of the demonstrators, told reporters that unemployment among educated women in Assam and other parts of northeastern India had reached alarming proportions. She complained of discrimination by employers against women even when they were fully qualified for the posts advertised.

"The government should see to it that women get more jobs — alternatively, ways should be found to get us married to men with decent jobs," Miss Das, a 26-year-old graduate of Gauhati University said.

The Jorhat women gave a tough time to a government committee on unemployment which visited the town. By keeping up a chorus of protest slogans, they almost made it impossible for the committee members to get down to their task.

Moves are under way to organize a statewide conference of unemployed educated women. If the Assam administration does not reserve a sizable proportion of all jobs for women, the movement will be carried to New Delhi, the national capital, to attract more attentiton.

Officials in Assam admitted that many qualified women are jobless but they said that in the context of local conditions unemployed men have to be given some preference.

As one official put it: "A jobless woman can at least look forward to marrying an employed man. But a jobless man has few such opportunities."

The latest government figures show there are nearly 70,000 persons, mostly men, registered with employment exchanges. They include hundreds of engineers, doctors and university graduates.

The government has not taken seriously the demand that it should help unemployed women find suitable husbands. One official said:

"The government cannot turn match-maker. We are just not experienced in this particular field."

At a women's meeting in Gauhati, the state capital, there were cheers when a speaker said: "If the prime minister of India can be a woman, why cannot proper weightage be given to women in all fields of employment?"

Reid-Meredith's "Spun Air" Wig . . . To Travel Lightly

The most carefree traveller you've ever had . . . "The Spun Air" Wig from Reid-Meredith. There's almost nothing to it . . . the "almost nothing" is in the cap. Full of holes and full of air and so lightweight that when you wear it you can forget it. All of Reid-Meredith's caps are lightweight. But "The Spun Air" is carried to the lightest extreme. In a process that's something like dropping stitches in crocheting, but a lot more scientific, the Reid-Meredith people came up with these spun knit bands held together by gossamer threads. (The diagram explains it.) The result is a bantamweight air conditioner, right there on top of your head. Cool breezes can blow through it, but your hair can't show through. "The Spun Air" of Dynel, the modacrylic fibre that behaves itself better than your own hair, in colors especially blended to look natural (in a range of 16 interesting shades.) Acupuncture Stories Can't Be Taken Literally—Doctor

Times News Services

Stories of the great successes of acupuncture should not be taken literally, a Vancouver doctor told a family physicians' conference in Prince George Wednesday.

Dr. Francis Ho, who has studied acupuncture, said all modern textbooks stress limitations of the Chinese needle treatment.

In surgery, it may be used to control the situation temporarily until surgery is available; in infectious diseases, only when antibiotics are not available, he said.

Ho is a family physician and a clinical instructor at the University of British Columbia.

Acupuncture statistics are "spiced with political propaganda," he said, and "one has to interpret the result with a grain of salt."

"Various research has to be carried out without political or economic influences before its acceptance can be considered," he said.

In Montreal, nurse Helen Anderson says she was on her feet a few minutes after a recent hernia operation and conscious throughout the painless surgery in which acupuncture was used as an anesthetic.

Dr. Chin Kwo performed the acupuncture in the 40-minute operation.

Mrs. Anderson had five needles inserted into her skin during the operation at the Reddy Memorial Hospital. Three of the needles were inserted at the hip, two in the leg.

"From beginning to end of the operation, I did not feel a thing," she said, "not even the insertion of the needles.

"Because of the analgesic effect of acupuncture, for nearly 12 hours after surgery I experienced none of the usual post-operative pain."

Mrs. Anderson, 56, bypassed the usual five-day convalescence period and returned to her home the next day.

Kwo, staff doctor at the hospital, has been doing research on acupuncture for two years and has applied the technique in his practice to relieve patients' pain but never before as an anesthetic during surgery.

Spokesman for the Canadian Medical Association and the Quebec College of Physicians and Surgeons also said they knew of no other such case.

Dr. Harry Stevens, who performed the surgery on Mrs. Anderson was enthusiastic about Monday's success.

He stressed, however, that he would like to see more successful cases before saying whether it is effective.

Stevens said that, prior to the operation, he was not as confident as Kwo that the procedure would work but "much to my amazement it did."

Stevens said an anesthetist was standing by during the operation but was not needed.

He said he was also surprised that the patient required no pain reliever after the operation, as is usual, and that she had much less bleeding than normal.

"I'm impressed by the results, but we have to see a lot more before making any judgment," Dr. Stevens added.

Although acupuncture now is practised in Europe, regulations governing its use in North America differ from province to province in Canada and from state to state in the U.S.

Dr. Norman Da Sylva, director of medical services for the Canadian Medical Association, said Tuesday the CMA has no set policy yet on acupuncture.

"We're trying to get information on it and at the moment we don't feel we have enough knowledge."

Meanwhile, in the U.S., four-year-old Marc Hagen apparently is able to hear words for the first time in his life after undergoing acupuncture treatments for nerve deafness.

Marc and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Budd Hagen of Mound, Minn., recently returned from Seattle where Marc received 11 acupuncture treatments at Standring Memorial Hospital.

"He's actually hearing words for the first time in his life," Mrs. Hagen said. Hagen said the "improvement is wonderful," but acknowledged that his son's hearing is still far from perfect.

Marc is among a very small group of North Americans with nerve deafness whom a few doctors believe they have helped with acupuncture.

Apathy Dogs Status Fight

I've come across an interesting booklet that, in my thinking, points up the fact that a good many women in our society today are not remotely interested in bettering conditions for their sex.

It's titled Status Anyone? and it records findings of a research project undertaken last year by the Status of Women Council, an organization formed to promote implementation of recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women that affect this province.

After receiving a Local Initiatives Project grant from the federal Department of Manpower and Immigration, the council launched what it named a Mini Commission.

Research workers, selected for their special skills, their personal qualities and their previous knowledge of, and interest in, the status of women in Canada, were hired and trained.

Age, educational and occupational backgrounds were widely varied for, as the booklet puts it, "it was felt that different points of view would produce better research."

A questionnaire was developed concerning equal rights for women in six areas — economic status (part-time work for women); equal pay-equal job opportunities; day care; education; lending institutions and women in politics.

Those to be interviewed were selected by a stratified random sample of households in Vancouver, Burnaby, North Vancouver and West Vancouver.

Research workers were given training in how to interview, emphasizing the importance of not interfering with a woman's answer, and the additional importance of not projecting their own thoughts or ideas to the woman being questioned.

It was a sound project. Well thought out. Well organized. But listen to some of the things that happened during the six weeks in which the interviewing took place.

First, the booklet reports, it was shown there is "an absolute paranoia in our society that now exists over the words 'women's lib'."

These research workers went out as representatives of a respected women's liberation group, the Status of Women Council, working on a survey that would ultimately benefit all women.

Yet, the minute they mentioned in their introduction, they were from a women's liberation group, they often had doors slammed in their face.

It got so bad that some interviewers simply introduced themselves at the door as doing a survey on a grant from Manpower. Others, when asked if this was "women's liberation," answered that they were working on a research study concerning women's rights.

Apparently the words "women's rights" were acceptable, but the words "women's liberation" made many people very nervous.

Apathy was another problem encountered. It was said, over and over again: "Well, there are injustices, but what can we do?"

Security seemed to breed apathy. Affluence and apathy appeared to go together.

One interviewer is quoted in the booklet as saying "with a certain amount of financial security, a home, children, possibly two cars, membership in one or more clubs, an active social life . . . why should women who have all this care about women's rights or social problems?

"It does not affect them in a personal way. These women would be threatened by any change."

Young women and very old women were more active and less apathetic in their reactions. It was mainly women in their middle years who showed indifference to many of the questions.

A computerized analysis was done on the completed questionnaires.

Results, as shown in the booklet, emphasize once again "the need for improving the status of women.

"The rights of working women need to be protected. More work options should be made available to women.

"Better child care and homemaker services are required. Our educational system must offer more opportunities for women. Banks, finance companies and stores extending credit must consider individual capabilities to pay instead of discriminating against women because of their sex."

Also: "More women must enter politics actively to achieve some of these ends."

Conclusions very definitely point up need for reforms.

Many women are fighting for these reforms. However it appears that many others are simply shrugging their shoulders, closing their eyes and bypassing responsibility.

A shocking indictment, when so many of the recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women—provincially and federally — are still to be implemented.

Silence Wisest Response To Insensitive Neighbor

DEAR ABBY: A neighbor of mine loves to sew, and she has made some lovely things. She made a beautiful dress and bonnet for my daughter's fourth birthday, so I took the child to a photography studio and had a picture taken of her in that outfit. Then I bought a frame for it and presented it to my neighbor to show her my appreciation.

She seemed pleased and placed the picture on her piano. A few months later I noticed that she had placed a picture of her dog in that frame, and my daughter's picture was nowhere to be seen. I finally told her that as long as she wasn't displaying my daughter's picture, I'd like to have it back. She said, "Certainly." Then she got my daughter's picture out of a drawer and handed it to me.

I said: "How about the frame?"

She replied: "Oh, you can buy another one for 75 cents."

Abby, I was so hurt. That frame cost me $1.50. I didn't want to start an argument with her so I just kept my mouth shut.

What would you have done? — Hurt.

DEAR HURT: I'd have kept my mouth shut.

DEAR ABBY: After 25 years of a happy, suburban marriage in ultra luxurious circumstances, with three children now in graduate schools, my wife and I are undergoing an amicable no-fault divorce because (as she puts it) "we have nothing in common except the children."

She's already found a future husband (a former college friend whom she rediscovered a year ago), has left our home awaiting the time when she can remarry. No alimony involved.

Frankly, Abby, I am bored with the suburban rat race, and want to start a new life elsewhere. The question is where? And with whom?

My children are into yoga, meditation, gurus, helping others, rejecting material things, and status. I am seriously considering adopting their lifestyle.

What do you say about my making such an abrupt change in my early 50s? Is this a passing fancy, or would it be a wise choice for me? And how do I find a partner while doing so? Or is therapy the answer?—Re-Evaluating.

DEAR RE: First things first. Don't look for a "partner" while you try to determine which route to pursue in your search for peace of mind — which is what you're after. Get into therapy and once you find your head you will know who you are. Then you can change your lifestyle if that's what you want.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Saturday, May 5
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Ideas may reach roadblocks. Means not all is smooth, but not all is lost, either. Key is to be thorough, to note what appears minor, to build on factual information. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio persons might play important roles.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be ready for change of scenery. Those who do much talking may want you to give without giving you anything in return. Know it and find alternatives. Gemini, Virgo persons might be in picture. Protect valuables.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Pressure could be applied by those who want you to live up to potential. This is no time for game playing in connection with obligations. Family will back you but you must show interest, display integrity.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Avoid basing actions on wishful thinking. Get behind scenes for valid answers. Someone may be telling tales out of school. Don't become involved in foolish conflict. Check with Pisces person.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may not immediately get what you want, but you do build for future. Many persons, quiet and unassuming, are beginning to back you. There is no flash, no loud applause. It is just a matter of fact that you are slowly but surely holding a winning hand.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Now you can complete project of importance. You can gain added recognition. Circle of admirers will increase. You draw people to you with their problems. Be sympathetic, sincere. But don't get inextricably involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What is worthwhile will take time. Know it and accept it. You could strike upon valuable, original concept. But there are nuances which need to be comprehended by potential backers. If you insist and rush, you invite loss.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Avoid trying to do too much at once. Concentrate forces. Build for future. Steer toward definite goal. Aquarian could play key role. One who cares much for you could appear indifferent. This is but temporary. Know it and be mature.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Let others show their hands. Be extremely cautious in legal area. Permit mate, close associate to express views. Consult one with experience. Don't attempt to be your own attorney. Strive to be aware of needs of those who seem argumentative.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your own ways, methods and pace serve your interests. Means be pleased with yourself. Refuse to permit any person to lower your self-esteem. You are making progress despite apparent obstacles. Check details. Thoroughness now is a necessity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may feel left out in cold by one who usually is enthusiastic. Key now is to be analytical without brooding. You are learning some lessons about persons who basically are immature. Don't compound error. You are ultimate "winner."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): One who seemed to merely be a friendly acquaintance could play important role. You are capable now of separating fact from fantasy. Family ties can be strengthened. Harmony can replace discord. You could be on road to happiness.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are vibrant, sexy, talented, able to express yourself in compelling, entertaining manner. You draw to you many born under Gemini and Virgo. December will be an outstanding month for you in 1973.

Eyes don't usually ache when something is wrong so that a defect or disease can only be detected during an eye examination.

Did you know that it is possible to examine a child's eye when he is only a few months old? Because some eye trouble can be nipped in the bud, parents should make sure that any eye problem their child may have, is diagnosed and treated as early as possible.

The folder When Should Children's Eyes Be Examined recommends that regular eye examinations begin when the child is one or two years old. It also reviews some of the danger signals for which parents can look out.

They can watch, for instance, if the child squints, if he frequently blinks or rubs his eyes. They can see if his eyes cross, particularly when he is tired. They can notice if his eyes are red and swollen or if he frowns excessively. They can also see if he holds his books very close to the face when he wants to look at pictures or read.

Sea's Steak Now in Stock

Fresh, beautiful British Columbia salmon steak is beginning to appear in the supermarkets and fish shops of Greater Victoria — at about $2 per pound.

Here then for the fresh salmon are some fresh ways to prepare it. The other ingredients and seasonings used in each of these two new recipes are mild and subtle so as to enhance — not mask — the delicate flavor of this prized fish.

As always, one of the main points to remember when cooking salmon or any other fish is: Don't overcook. The flesh of fish contains little connective tissue, therefore does not require a long cooking period. It is cooked when it loses its transluscent appearance, becomes opaque, and the flesh flakes easily if pierced with a fork.

These recipes can be brought out any time of year. Frozen salmon — equally nutritious but less moist — may be substituted for the fresh as long as it is thawed in advance for easier handling in preparing the recipe.

SALMON STEAKS AMBROSIA

4 thick salmon steaks
1 cup finely chopped onions
1 cup shredded coconut
1 cup chopped parsley
3 tblsp. melted butter
1 cup cream
4 eggs
1½ tsp. paprika

Wash salmon steaks and sprinkle with salt. Place onions, coconut and parsley in buttered heatproof dish. Place fish on top and pour over melted butter. Beat eggs slightly and add cream. Pour over salmon. Sprinkle with paprika. Bake in 400 degree F. oven for 25 minutes until golden brown. Makes four servings.

STEAMED SALMON WITH ALMOND SAUCE

4 thick salmon steaks
5 tblsp. butter
2 sliced onions
1 tblsp. lemon juice
1 bay leaf
¾ cup almonds, blanched
2 cloves garlic
¼ cup breadcrumbs
½ tsp. salt
3 tblsp. olive oil
4 tblsp. vinegar
4 tsp. lemon juice
2 tsp. water

Sprinkle fish with salt, place in large covered pot and heat gently for 10 minutes with butter, sliced onions, one tablespoon lemon juice and bay leaf. Meanwhile, prepare sauce — crush almonds, finely chop garlic, mix with breadcrumbs, salt and olive oil. Add vinegar, lemon juice and water. Pour sauce over partially-cooked salmon and bake in 350 degree F. oven until golden brown (about 15-20 minutes). Serve with buttered potatoes, peas and artichokes.

(Note: Use blender or mortar and pestle to grind almonds and garlic.)

Rare Illness Treated

BOSTON (AP) — Osmarina Santana has returned to Brazil with relief from a rare lymphatic disease and the prospect for a normal life.

After unsuccessful treatments and being told that nothing could help her, the 17-year-old girl came to Boston from her home at Belem last December as a partial cripple.

When she left Monday, she was able to walk and — for the first time she could remember — to run.

Osmarina suffers from lymphedema, commonly called Milroy's Disease, in which the lymph fluid from body cells cannot drain because of inadequate lymphatic vessels.

The fluid accumulates in the legs and causes swelling, pressure and pain, making it difficult, if not impossible, to walk. Firm, fibrous tissue forms in the swollen areas, keeping the legs large and unsightly.

Dr. Neil Feins of the Boston University Medical Centre removed seven pounds of tissue from Osmarina's right leg and later removed a lesser amount from her left.

While the method does not cure the disease, Feins says, there are no reported cases of the swelling's returning.

Pope Picks Commission To Check Out Liberation

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul has set up an international commission to investigate ways to "liberate" women in the Roman Catholic Church and in society at large.

The youngest member named to the commission is a U.S. school girl.

The pontiff instructed the 26-member commission to extend research to such controversial questions as whether the church should open the way for women deacons and women priests. But he reserved to himself all final decisions.

The commission, which has a majority of women, was asked to study what makes women "happy or unhappy, their aspirations and their frustrations."

A Vatican announcement warned, however, that the commission's research should be "conducted in the light of the Christian philosophy on woman and of the pastoral mission of the church in this field."

The commission's president is an Italian, Bishop Enrico Bartoletti of Lucca.

The North American student is Deborah Cheloman of Arlington, Va.

The commission has been in preparation for 1½ years. Its formation was among the recommendations submitted to the Pope by the third synod of world bishops in November 1971, when George Cardinal Flahiff of Winnipeg challenged the church's traditional stand toward women and came out in favor of women priests.

Setting Pollution Standards An Art, Says Ex-PCB Head

Arbitrary yardsticks should be avoided in setting pollution control standards, a public inquiry into municipal sewage and garbage disposal was told today.

Victoria engineer C. J. Keenan, a former director of the province's Pollution Control Branch, said discretionary powers "must be retained" in objectives to permit changes on the basis of technical findings.

Keenan, director of the civil engineering firm of Ker, Priestman, Keenan and Associates, presented a brief today to the pollution inquiry at Newcombe Auditorium.

"The essence of this entire presentation is to show that standard setting is very much of an art in which competence comes only after years of exposure to the subject," he said.

"The answers are not in textbook theory nor in test tubes but in the ability to deduce realistic safety factors by using epidemiological evidence and empirical data gleaned over the years."

He said arbitrary regulations for "whatever reasons they may be promulgated can only create untenable positions for honest professionals who must use their technological knowledge to advise of the proper course of action."

Keenan, who resigned as Pollution Control Branch director in 1969, said "let us not be stampeded by pseudo-experts who are motivated for reasons not outwardly apparent. "Let us be wary of those who are using the intangible and controversial nature of pollution to confound our better judgments."

He said too many people, especially those seeking to have the letter of the law enforced, fail to appreciate that criteria represent an average condition.

Harm to waters occurs over long periods of time, he said.

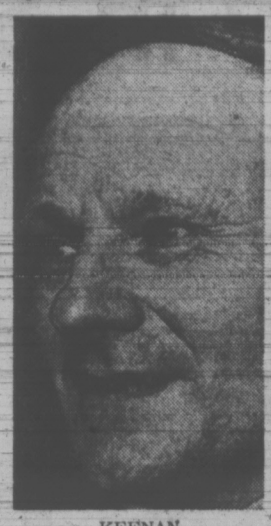

"Therefore to prosecute for a short-term violation, as advocated by those who do not understand, is not only unwarranted but ridiculous. Objectives must clearly cover this aspect and allow the judicial process the right to apply perspective and not simply the letter of the law," he said.

The dumping of wastes in the ocean "is no different to what nature does, day in and day out." Great masses of sand, silt and debris are carried to the sea in rivers and form delta areas covering in some cases hundreds of square miles.

"The Fraser River carries an average of 7.5 million tons of silt per year down to the Straits of Georgia. In these very waters we have one of the world's great fish runs," he said.

The silt was not as a result of man's pollution but from the natural erosion of the banks of the river above Prince George.

"I use the foregoing to illustrate the great need to retain perspective when setting objectives," he said.

Logger Sports On June 2

Seventeen competitive events, including tree climbing and log birling, will be featured at the annual Woss Lake Loggers Sports in the Nimpkish Valley on northern Vancouver Island on Saturday, June 2.

Access to Woss is by logging road from Gold River in the south and from Port Hardy in the north. The road is open to public travel on weekends and statutory holidays and between 5 p.m. and 6 a.m. on weekdays.

Overnight visitors will have a choice of four campsites at Woss Lake, Vernon Lake, Schoen Lake and at the mouth of the Nimpkish River.

EXPERT ADMITS 'SOLUTION' WOULDN'T DO THE JOB

Secondary treatment of municipal sewage is ineffective against chlorine, an official of Environment Canada agreed at a provincial pollution inquiry Thursday.

Ken Jackson of Vancouver was being cross-examined by Bob Gardiner, representing the Greater Vancouver Regional District, on the federal agency's brief which warned of the dangers to fish of adding chlorine to sewage effluent without in turn dechlorinating the effluent.

Gardiner asked if the recommendation of secondary treatment to remove toxicity from chlorine is not valid.

Jackson said it wasn't, because unchlorinated primary treated sewage was toxic to fish, thus the recommendation to use secondary treatment.

He said he concedes that secondary treatment has no effect on removing chlorine, but Environment Canada's brief recommended secondary treatment for removal of "toxicity" from sewage and recommended other measures for removal of chlorine, where that substance needs to be added for health reasons.

He said, about secondary treatment, that the federal government has taken the view that "the best practicable treatment should be applied across the board. It's a principle."

Asked specifically if this applies whatever the dilution given sewage by the receiving waters, he said, "it's a matter of philosophy as much as anything else." But he admitted toxicity might not be a problem if there is "great" diluting capacity.

Golf Course Use For Sewage Proposed

Use of golf courses for sewage disposal was advocated Thursday by a golf course architect in a presentation to the provincial pollution inquiry.

James Patterson Izatt of North Vancouver said a city with a daily effluent flow of one million gallons could build a 100-acre golf course, each acre absorbing 50,000 gallons of effluent.

In the Victoria area, the Macaulay Point outfall is designed to handle up to 12 million gallons daily.

Half the effluent sprayed on the course would be lost through evaporation and the rest would be filtered through the sub-soil prior to holding in a storage pond for aeration and then discharge as irrigation or into rivers.

Izatt said the capacity of a 100-acre golf course is about 14 million gallons at any one time. Movement of effluent through underground pipes and cells would be automatically controlled, under his suggestion.

SHOWERS END DRY SPELL

Overnight showers Wednesday ended a two-week dry spell that gave the greater Victoria area its driest April in 17 years last month.

The Victoria weather office recorded .18 inches of rain at the airport, but the weathermen said less fell in downtown Victoria.

The city's last real rain was April 16, when .23 inches fell.

Last month was the ninth driest April on record, with .55 inches of rain, compared to the lowest, recorded in 1956, with .09 inches.

Average rainfall for April is 1.39 inches.

The mean temperature last month was 48.3 degrees, .4 degrees less than average, with the highest temperature 62 degrees, on April 13, and the low, 39 degrees, on April 19 and 28.

The sun shone for 244 hours, 46 hours more than normal and the eighth sunniest on record.

Average wind speed was 11.1 m.p.h. compared to the normal of 11.5 m.p.h.

Winter Festivals at Royal?

The Royal Theatre should be made a heritage building and Greater Victoria should hold winter festivals of performing arts, Mrs. Carolyn Smyly said Thursday.

Mrs. Smyly, president of the newly-formed Hallmark Society, said the city should take advantage of the recent changes in the Municipal Act which permits municipalities to designate as heritage buildings those they consider of sufficient historical and architectural value.

Her society intends to donate plaques to owners of heritage buildings — ranging from public buildings to private homes.

Supporting Mayor Peter Pollen's suggestion that the theatre be bought by the Capital Regional District, she said:

"There has to be a balance between sports and cultural activities. Lots of money is spent on ice arenas, there is no reason why payments couldn't be stretched over a period of years."

GORDON HEAD GROUP EYES EAST-WEST BUS

Development of east-west public transportation in Saanich is among topics likely to be discussed at the annual meeting of Gordon Head and District Ratepayers' Association Tuesday at 8 p.m.

President Barrie Goult said the meeting in St. George's Church parish hall at Tyndall and San Juan is open to anyone in the general area sharing an interest in municipal development.

Other matters before the association include designation of northern Gordon Head as a special development area, minimum standards for construction and a branch library to serve the university district.

Occupier Ruling Impossible: City

It will be impossible for the city administration to inform all "occupiers" of properties affected by rezonings as required by new provincial legislation, according to Victoria city council.

Failing to notify just one occupier could invalidate an entire bylaw or land-use contract, Mayor Peter Pollen said Thursday, as council at a special meeting, approved a petition to the union of B.C. Municipalities calling for a change in the proposed amendment to the Municipal Act.

"It's a very good objective, but just an impossible chore," said Pollen.

The city would have the public hearing notices sent to owners only.

The proposed amendment would go beyond current regulations which simply have a public hearing advertised but not specifically announced by mail to affected parties.

$35,000 Collected In Seal Campaign

Donations to the Easter Seal Campaign — staged during March and April by Lions clubs of B.C. for Crippled Children — have reached the $35,000 mark and organizers are confident contributions will reach the $45,000 goal.

Campaign assistant chairman Roy St. Dennis said the society is pleased with the result. Contributions which are still trickling in will be used to finance summer camps and transportation for Victoria's crippled children.

Last year the society raised about $36,000.

Strike Notice Given

Strike notice has been served on Hafer Machine Co. Ltd., 1720 Store St., a spokesman for the International Association of Machinists confirmed Thursday.

Business agent Hugh Weydert said the main issues in the contract dispute are wages, fringe benefits and renewal of the contract.

There are 15 employees involved, members of the union's Local 456.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Two men found in possession of 14 grams of hashish April 14 were each fined $100 by Judge William Ostler in provincial court Thursday.

Stephen Lindsay Giles, 18, of 3334 Wickheim, and Robert Raymond Johnstone, 17, of 3900 Metchosin, were stopped by Saanich police.

Two hashpipes were also found.

★ ★ ★

A man visited by RCMP drug squad officers April 3 was fined $100 for possession of hashish.

Donald Greer MacDonald, 23, 1-1731 Cook, was caught in his home preparing to smoke some hashish. About one gram was found.

★ ★ ★

Doreen Eleanor Mansell, 36, of 1071 Chesterfield, was fined $250 for stealing items valued at $3.13 from Town and Country Safeway.

★ ★ ★

In traffic court, Judge Harold Alder fined John Patrick Fortune, 21, of 4423 Tyndall, $350 for impaired driving.

Ronald Robert Caldwell, 22, of 3034 Donald, was fined $300 and prohibited from driving for one month except for work purpose for driving with a blood-alcohol content of more than .08 per cent.

A 19-year-old heroin user was sentenced to four months definite and six months indeterminate with a recommendation by Ostler that the sentence be served in an outdoor detention centre.

David Michael Henderson, 4219 Carey, was stopped in the 600-block Fort Jan. 9 and a small quantity of heroin was found on him.

In sentencing Ostler said Henderson's attempt to quit using drugs is "a very hard fight. . . . I wish you luck."

Canada Studies Oil, Gas Options: Hoard Fuel or Sell at High Prices

MONTREAL (CP) — The question of whether Canada should hoard its oil and gas reserves or sell now for high prices and a stake in future energy research by other nations occupied the opening discussion at the annual Scitec meeting Thursday.

Scitec, the commonly-used name for the Association of the Scientific, Engineering and Technological Community of Canada, brought together a panel of four energy experts who presented a wide range of views on this question to about 100 delegates from across Canada.

Their views, augmented by discussion from the floor, included a "Canada-first policy" in which national oil and gas would be sold at low prices in Canada and reserves kept for long periods so "we can keep our options open."

At the opposite end of the scale was a "sell now" policy with Canada joining all other nations in research to find alternative energy sources.

World reserves will be used up in about 33 years anyway, based on present rates of use, said George Grant, a petroleum geologist with Chevron Standard Ltd. in Calgary. However, Canada has plenty of supplies for her own and projected use.

"I won't use the word crisis once," he said, discussing Canada's position.

Dr. G. N. Patterson, head of aerospace studies at the University of Toronto and study leader of a working group gathering data for a Science Council report on energy, said Canada will eventually have to be involved with other nations' future policies.

It was important to decide now whether Canada should use its fortunate position as a supplier to bargain with the U.S. for involvement in its research and development of alternative sources of power.

Patterson, whose report will not be ready until autumn, said he is convinced already that there are plenty of energy options.

"If we haven't enough energy, it's not Mother Nature's fault, it's ours."

Already Canada is using nuclear energy based on splitting the nucleus of the atom, he said. And research is advancing on safe harnessing of nuclear fusion, the power source of the hydrogen bomb.

Research has only just begun on some of the other energy sources — such as harnessing the sun's power efficiently, using geothermal energy from the hot bedrock or hot springs of the earth's centre, and using tidal power or the flows of the ocean gradients, he added.

'Guillotine' Windfall Tested in Newfoundland

OTTAWA (CP) — Quick now, what likes wind, works like a skipping rope, could be used as a guillotine and will probably be built in Newfoundland?

Answer: A windmill, but one significantly different than those commonly associated with farmyard water wells or Don Quixote.

The new windmill, or wind turbine, has been designed by two National Research Council scientists concerned with methods of supplying cheap power.

Raj Rangi and Peter South, the aeronautical engineers who have developed the windmill, Friday said they hope about a dozen of the machines will be sprinkled through Labrador, along the east coast and the Mackenzie River valley by next winter, providing cheap power for such things as communications equipment.

The machine has three metal blades, shaped like bent airplane wings, attached top and bottom to a vertical shaft. The whole thing rests on a stand just above head level—that's to prevent any accidental beheadings when the blades whirl—and is held down by wires.

Like a skipping rope, the blades keep their convex shape as they whirl around in the wind, working no matter what way the wind blows.

The wind turbine, 10 times lighter than conventional windmills, costs considerably less to build. It also is more efficient. A 15-foot diameter wind turbine operating in a 15-mile-an-hour wind, for instance, produces one horsepower. The power is increased eight times when the wind speed is doubled to 30 miles an hour.

Primulas Come First In Several Ways

Of the more than 150 species of primulas only a handful are grown by home gardeners, but these few are well loved.

This southern coastal area of Canada is an ideal growing place for primulas, for it is indeed the "first" non-bulbous, herbaceous plant to flower in our gardens as its name implies. The Latin primus means first — hence primula.

The primrose is Primula vulgaris (previously P. acaulis, stemless) having one flower to a stem; the polyanthus is a primula with many flowers to a stem, hence P. polyantha.

The beginning gardener will no doubt acquire the hybrid named Wanda, claret colored and prolific, for it must be the hardiest of all the primulas. It survives winters of hard frost, summers of drought, and neglect.

With ordinary good garden soil and a minimum of care other species add color, and in some cases elusive perfume to spring and early summer gardens.

The polyanthuses, now passing their peak of bloom, are perhaps the showiest of the more easily grown primulas. The hybrids in this group can scarcely be counted, for new plants are constantly being raised by cross pollination in amateurs' gardens.

As these earliest kinds near the end of their flowering season their space is wanted for summer blooms. So what to do with them? A new gardener might well ask: "Shall I cut them back? Will they flower again?"

If the place they occupy will be in full sun during summer, or if the space is needed, any of the ordinary, everyday primulas (as distinct from the alpine types) may be lifted for replanting elsewhere or divided and replanted to grow all summer.

While the soil is still warm in September, move the plants back to the sunny borders again. With the soil reconditioned with leafmould, they will go on growing until really cold weather.

But remember they may be left where they are if given a bit of care now. Cut off the old flower heads, and yellow or otherwise damaged leaves. Topdress the soil around with sifted leafmould, fibrous compost or very old cow manure. Push some around each plant, beneath the spread of foliage.

Watering during summer is needed, for these primulas have no real period of dormancy as some of the alpine species require.

Auriculas with their smooth leaves, P. denticulata with round heads of tiny flowers; P. rosea, pink flowers on short stems; and P. vulgaris (acaulis) the Primrose of English woodlands, all belong in the Primula genus. By some gardeners, all are called Primroses.

To divide the plants, lift, shake off surplus soil, then separate into pieces each having a crown of leaves and a set of roots. A sharp knife makes a clean cut when a stem needs division.

The roots must not dry before replanting. Wrap in wet peatmoss and newspaper if delayed in the work.

SOLUTION MONDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In expert circles, the double of a slam contract is a conventional bid which commands the doubler's partner to lead the first suit bid by dummy. An example of this type of double can be observed in today's deal. Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

NORTH
♡ Q 10 7
◇ 4
♣ A Q J 7 3

WEST
♠ K J 8 6 4
♡ J 8 5 3 2

EAST
♠ Q 9 3
♡ K 9 6 4
◇ 10 8 7 5 3
♣ 2

SOUTH
♠ 7
♡ A
◇ A K Q J 9 6 2
♣ K 10 8 5

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 ♡	Pass	7 ♣	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	7 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♡.

The bidding was top-notch. When North rebid his club suit after South had made a jump-shift response of two diamonds, South drove on to the grand slam upon learning that North possessed the two outstanding aces.

West's double of South's seven-club rebid was a categoric command for East to lead diamonds, South's first-bid suit. As is evident, had North been permitted to play the hand at seven clubs, he would have suffered a one-trick defeat, since West would have captured the opening diamond lead by trumping.

But South also realized that West's double, calling for a diamond lead, was almost surely based on a diamond void in West's hand. So he chose to bid seven notrump, to negate West's ruffing ability.

On West's opening lead of the three of hearts, dummy's ten was put up. Although it didn't affect the final result, East made a good play when he declined to put up his king (South was known to have the heart ace, and putting up the king would have made a winner out of dummy's queen). South won the trick with his ace.

Reverting back to the bidding, South appreciated that West figured to be void of diamonds; and, hence, East was the possessor of the five outstanding cards in this suit.

At trick two, declarer led a low club to dummy's jack. Then came the board's singleton diamond, and when East followed suit with the three-spot, South inserted his nine. With the nine-spot winning, declarer now had fulfilled contract.

It may be argued that West should not have doubled the seven-club contract, in which case a diamond lead would have enabled West to win the trick by trumping. Perhaps. But, in all probability, East would then have led a spade or a heart at trick one.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"You got twenty-three in all," said Judy. "That's a funny number. Were there special prices?"

"No, they were all priced singly. It just happened that way," replied Andy. "I bought seven at one price, and the rest at 36 cents each less. And there was something funny. The two totals in cents had the same three figures, but in reversed orders."

What were the prices?

(Answer Monday)

Yesterday's answer: STREET was 135773.

LOST CHORDS IN THE WOODS

CORBY, England (CP) — Scottish piper George McIntyre now must retreat to the woods when he plays following his move from Scotland to this quiet rural village in Northamptonshire. Whereas the sounds of George's bagpipes were highly appreciated back home, Sorby residents were quick to protest.

So George drives out to a nearby wood to practice.

Major Powers 'Keeping Canada Down'

CALGARY (CP) — Canada's continuing role as a supplier of raw materials will result in high unemployment, increased foreign ownership, and an over-valued dollar, says Eric Kierans, economics professor at McGill University.

The three major economic blocs in the world — the United States, Japan and the European Common Market — want to see Canada continue in this role, he told a Canadian Club meeting.

"They see us as a supplier of raw materials and resources and as a consumer of their manufactured goods.

"Each of these blocs is weak underneath. They depend on the import of a wide variety of raw materials which are basic to the health of their economies."

The former Liberal cabinet minister warned of two consequences if Canada pursues her present course:

—The Canadian dollar will be over-valued in relation to productivity, creating export difficulties for such industries as forest products and agriculture.

—Foreign ownership of Canadian industry will increase and the hopes of provinces such as Alberta to expand their industrial gas will vanish.

Kierans said a handful of giant multi-national corporations control the bulk of the world's petroleum and mineral resources and their power is growing every day.

"We have created these middlemen who control both the resources and the markets . . . monopolists who are interested in their own ends."

Albertans own their petroleum resources and the question is whether they are getting a fair return for their sale and whethere the needs of future generations are being considered in their exploitation, he said.

"Nobody can quarrel with Alberta getting an additional $22 million in revenues when the price of crude oil goes up 25 cents a barrel.

"What disturbs us is that the (oil) companies are getting the other $100 million."

Kierans called for a complete re-evaluation of Canada's policies including the role of science and technology.

Nurses Accept, Avert Strike

EDMONTON (CP) — Staff nurses at the Royal Alexandra Hospital Thursday accepted a two-year contract, averting a threatened strike called for Monday, May 7.

The nurses called off the strike after the hospital's board of governors agreed to a settlement negotiated earlier in the day which gives the nurses a starting salary of $605 a month retroactive to Jan. 1 and $625 a month Aug. 1.

The second year of the contract will provide a starting salary of $665 a month.

The package offered by the hospital met virtually all the demands made by the nurses and by Aug. 1 will give the 628 staff nurses at the hospital a salary scale mid-way between Saskatchewan and British Columbia nurses.

"We are satisfied with the terms," said Yvonne Chapman, chief negotiator for the Alberta Association of Retail Nurses.

She conceded that the failure to get the $625-a-month starting salary retroactive to Jan. 1 was "part of the trade-off."

Joe Katzin, chairman of the Royal Alexandra's board of governors, confirmed the agreement would give the nurses nearly all they asked for.

The 14 per cent wage increase in 1973 represents an eight per cent catch-up and six per cent cost of living increase.

The nurses had been complaining that they had fallen behind the other western provinces.

Within minutes after settlement was announced, Bob Rosser, executive director of the hospital, ordered doctors and nurses on duty to reopen the emergency treatment units closed at 4 p.m. Tuesday in preparation for the threatened strike.

One Reason to Quit

EDMONTON (CP) — A $30,000 fire at a farm, "so close to the city you could throw a baseball across the boundary," has hastened Lorne Percheson's plan to retire from chicken farming. Percheson's son, Larry, said the first time he called the city fire department he was told he would have to guarantee a payment of $200 because the farm is just outside the city's northeast limits. The city has no firefighting agreement with the municipal district of Sturgeon. While Percheson lost his 2,000-bird chicken house, an automobile purchased two days earlier and some welding supplies, he waited for trucks to arrive from Gibbons, 25 miles away in the municipal district.

Freedom 'Eroded'

WINNIPEG (CP) — Ever-increasing government programs in social welfare have been costly failures and have eroded personal freedoms in the process, Daniel Sprague, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, said Thursday.

Fewer on Welfare

WINNIPEG (CP) — For the first time in recent years, the number of persons receiving welfare in Manitoba has declined. About 800 persons dropped off the welfare rolls between January, 1972, and January, 1973, and the province's estimated welfare rate of 5.5 per cent is now one of the lowest in Canada.

Call From 'Boss' Startles Lineman

COURTENAY — "Hello," Premier Dave Barrett said today into the headset he'd taken from an operator at the British Columbia Telephone Co. office here, "I could be your new boss."

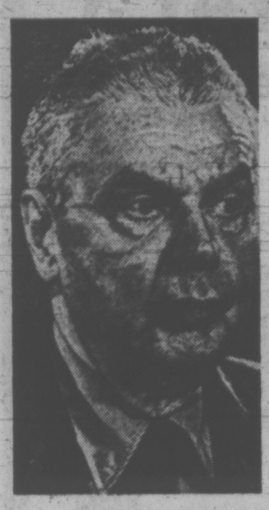

"Who the hell are you?" was the reply from a surprised phone technician at the other end of the line.

Premier Barrett unexpectedly walked into the telephone office, across the street from the municipal hall here, when he was asked to pose for photographs.

"How would you like working for me?" the premier asked about a dozen employees at the telephone office.

The only reply he got was polite giggles, smiles, and shrugged shoulders.

Premier Barrett has said it is his government's intention to eventually take over B.C. Telephone.

OTTAWA — "You don't let a man like this sit by the road at that time of night," an Ontario Provincial Police constable said Thursday, referring to John Diefenbaker.

The car in which Diefenbaker, 77, and three others were riding in ran out of gas east of Ottawa about 2 a.m.

Constable Russ Lakcey said he found an off-duty policeman and one of the Diefenbaker party trying to rouse a gas station owner.

He drove to the car and offered Diefenbaker, the member of Parliament for Prince Albert, a ride home.

"We talked about police work, hockey, guns . . . all kinds of things."

WASHINGTON — The Internal Revenue Service has collected $2.2 million in taxes from 41 wealthy taxpayers who originally reported they owed no taxes in 1971, Treasury Secretary George Schultz said Thursday.

Shultz told a Senate appropriations subcommittee that the returns of the 41 taxpayers with annual incomes of more than $200,000 were among 93 audited by the IRS after they reported they owed no 1971 income tax.

The $2.2 million collected figures out to about $53,000 a taxpayer.

COLUMBUS, Ga. — "Unbelievable," Mrs. Phyllis Osborne commented when told she had given birth to a 16-pound 2-ounce baby girl.

"I don't see how I carried her," said Mrs. Osborne. The baby, Jill Diane, was delivered at Columbus Medical Centre by caesarean section.

NEW YORK — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis received the annual International Conservation Award of the International Atlantic Salmon Foundation at a dinner here.

In presenting the award, foundation president Joseph Cullman recalled that Davis last year put into effect, and then strongly defended, a ban on commercial Atlantic salmon netting in the approaches to the major salmon rivers of eastern Canada.

HANNIBAL, Mo. — When Bernard Williams, the new mayor of Hannibal, moved into his city hall office Wednesday, he found two red rings drawn in bright red crayon on the desk and floor of the office.

Outgoing Mayor Henry Glascock, defeated by Williams last month after serving one term, explained the drawings.

"It's where I put the buckets when it rains. The roof leaks. A mayor can't be expected to remember where everything goes."

Burned-Out Bulbs Light Their Way

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Residents of Cherry Creek, a rural district of this community, should thank Arnie Eivinsdon every time it gets dark.

Keeping the lights burning in their homes is costing him a fortune in light bulbs.

Eivinsdon says his light bulbs have been burning out at an unusually high rate since he moved into his home in 1968.

A year ago, he decided to start keeping a record and when the total reached 27 last March, he phoned British Columbia Hydro officials to find out why.

Hydro officials checked and told him his light bulb problem resulted from the power input to his house being too high. But, officials added, lowering his input to normal levels would leave the Cherry Creek area without adequate power.

Six weeks ago, Hydro reported it had lowered the power as much as it could. The result: Arnie's bulbs, including several guaranteed 1,000 and 3,000 hours of life, are popping faster than ever — 16 in six weeks.

Piccadilly's Last Flower Girl Dies

LONDON (CP) — It was "Goodbye, Piccadilly" Thursday for Aggie Pegg, the flower lady of Piccadilly Circus whose death at 62 has robbed London of a colorful character.

Aggie's funeral procession, a stylish affair of 12 cars which escorted her body to a West London cemetery, made a special detour through the famous Circus where she had sold her roses, violets and carnations for more than 50 years.

Aggie, who started at the age of 10 helping her grandmother, was the only flower seller to be granted a licence for a Piccadilly pitch. She had her basket first below the statue of Eros in the centre of the Circus, and later moved to a spot in front of Swan and Edgar's department store.

It was estimated she sold about 1.5 million roses to Piccadilly strollers and in the old BBC radio program In Town Tonight it was her Cockney voice calling "Violets, lovely violets," in the montage of city sounds that introduced each night's edition.

Aggie sold flowers to the late Princess Marina, to movie star Julie Andrews and to C. B. Cochran, the pre-second World War theatre impresario, who always bought a carnation for his lapel. Once, when she was young, an anonymous admirer left a love poem in her basket.

Aggie saw the denizens of Piccadilly Circus change from the top-hatted theatre-goers of the 1920s to the hippies of the 1970s, and took the occasional tough customer or drug addict in her stride.

"She was a very big woman," recalled one of her nephews, Reg Brady. "She was like Apple Annie, the character out of Damon Runyon. If she'd have hit anyone, she'd have killed them."

She kept her promise never to talk about her sales to royalty, but enjoyed a touch of showmanship herself. At the London premier of the stage musical My Fair Lady, she sold flowers in the auditorium of Drury Lane Theatre, to show how Eliza Doolittle, the Cockney flower-seller heroine of the play, would have done the job in real life.

Divers Hunt for Inca Gold

QUITO, Ecuador (UPI) — Two U.S. divers started a search today for the fabled treasure of Atahulalpa, the last Inca emperor whose people paid a $4 million ransom for him in 1532 in gold and silver bullion.

The search, sponsored by the Unitel Corp. of Atlanta, Ga., is the latest in a series of attempts to find — if it exists — a treasure legend says was buried with Atahaulpa after his execution by the Spanish conquerer Francisco Pizarro.

Divers Chris Christiansen and Clint Provosto said they would film the depths of the icy Llanganitis Mountain lakes, about 90 miles east of Quito, as the first step in the search.

The search centres on the lakes because it was there, a 16th century Roman Catholic priest said, that Incas hurled their treasure after discovering the Spaniards had killed Atahualpa.

The priest, Vicente De Valverde, also drew a map of the area.

The treasure, De Valverde said, was accumulated to pay more ransom for their emperor. The Incas already had paid $4 million in bullion when Pizarro ordered Atahulpa burned as a pagan.

$200,000 GIFT REPAYS RESCUE

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — A young bush pilot who rescued four wealthy American businessmen last summer after a canoeing accident will receive a $200,000 gift when he reaches 25.

Randy Daoust, 19, said early today he signed a series of papers in Edmonton about a month ago.

"I don't know what kind of investment they have the money in," he said, "but they've got about $100,000 invested now and it will be $200,000, or maybe more, when I turn 25."

There are no conditions attached to the gift, he said.

"They told me about Christmas time that they were doing it for me, but who believes that kind of stuff?"

A common sense guide to investing #3

Understanding common stocks, mutual funds, and corporate bonds

A short primer from Merrill Lynch, Royal Securities on the three most common ways to put your money to work. How they differ, and how to pick the one that could be best for you.

COMMON STOCKS, mutual funds, and bonds are considered the big three of investing.

Your first investment is almost certain to be in one of this triumvirate. So, probably will your second, third, and fourth. Many investors never venture into any other area.

So here is a short guide to each.

Common stocks

When you buy common stocks, you buy a share of a company that you think is going to do well.

The actual purchase of stock is relatively simple. The tough part is deciding on the company in whose potential growth you'd like to share.

And that's what your broker is for.

He does the spade work.

At Merrill Lynch, Royal Securities we do a lot of spade work. We make a full appraisal of a company before we recommend its stock.

And we rank most of our recommended stocks on a scale that goes from very blue chip to highly speculative.

What's right for one investor isn't necessarily right for another.

While we like to see some of our customers invest in speculative growth stock, we're happy to see others put their money into established companies with proven growth records. Companies that could go on growing over the years in spite of short-term fluctuations.

There are common stocks to match almost every investment need.

So know your investment objectives, and tell us what they are.

Once we know what you hope to do with the money you might make from your investments: speculate for capital gain, provide for an early retirement, send your children to college, or add to your income right now, we'll be able to help you make those first investment decisions.

Mutual funds

Mutual funds are large collections of stocks and bonds handled by professional money management teams.

Before you buy shares in a mutual fund, you study a lot of mutual funds. Or you talk to a broker who has studied a lot of mutual funds.

You'll probably do the latter because there are hundreds of mutual funds, each designed to meet different needs.

At Merrill Lynch, Royal Securities we have a list of selected mutual funds. These funds were recommended by our Research Department after an exhaustive study of the portfolios, investment objectives, and quality of management of over 100 mutual funds.

From the 20 funds on our selected list, we will help you choose the fund that best matches your objectives, be they growth or income or a combination of the two.

Corporate bonds

Corporate bonds are loans you make to a company.

The company is obligated to pay you the face value of your bond at a specified time, and to pay you a set annual rate of interest until that time.

Before you buy a company's bonds, you must decide whether the company can keep up the interest payments specified. And that's where your broker comes in.

At Merrill Lynch, Royal Securities we can give you a professionally researched opinion on the ability of a company to meet its bond obligations.

We can give you professional advice on handling your bonds, and when to trade them. Since bond prices have a habit of fluctuating, there are times when you can exchange bonds and increase your income.

If you want to invest in bonds, talk to your Merrill Lynch, Royal Securities account executive. He'll show you how bonds can play an effective part in the overall performance of your investment portfolio.

More information

If this information on the big three of investing has whetted your appetite for more, you might like to order a copy of How to Invest. It's a highly informative booklet covering most areas of investment. It discusses the things you should look for in a good broker. And it's written in plain language, free of all but the essential bits of stock market jargon.

And if you're thinking of investing, and would like someone to talk it over with, call the manager of your nearest Merrill Lynch, Royal Securities office today.

Tell him you'd like to open an account.

Tell him how much money you have to invest, and what your investment objectives are.

He'll match you up with an account executive he feels will suit you. Someone who'll show you how to apply the Merrill Lynch, Royal Securities brand of common sense to all your investing. Someone who'll help you put your money to work.

Bushnell Deal Off

VANCOUVER (CP) — Frank A. Griffiths, president of Western Broadcasting Co., said Thursday that Standard Broadcasting Co. won't exercise its option to buy Western's majority interest in Bushnell Communications Ltd.

He reported that Standard has been frustrated by the Bushnell company from making a financial examination of its books, "customary in a purchase of the type contemplated in its option."

"All attempts to remedy this refusal have been frustrated and accordingly, Standard will not exercise its option," Griffiths said.

Western was blocked from acquisition of Bushnell, an Ontario company that owns television stations in Ottawa and Cornwall and two cable systems, by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, on the grounds that TV stations should remain independent of cable systems.

Western had acquired a majority interest in Bushnell and, when turned down by CRTC, arranged with Standard for sale of its Bushnell interests. Standard, whose holdings are in radio stations, apparently could have acquired Bushnell control without running into CRTC disapproval.

PORTUGAL NIPPED

SOFIA (AP) — Bulgaria defeated Portugal 2-1 before 80,000 fans Wednesday in a World Cup soccer qualification match.

BARRETT RAPS BANKS

COURTENAY (CP) — Premier Dave Barrett wants a "major overhaul" of Canada's banking system.

Speaking to a secondary school assembly here Thursday, Barrett said "the banking system in Canada does need a major overhaul in my opinion. Watch my presentation to the Western premiers' conference and I'll leave it at that."

The premier refused to elaborate saying, "it's a subject I don't care to discuss further at this time."

The premier said the statement will be part of a joint brief prepared by the Western premiers at the conference in Calgary in late July.

The contents of that brief should be known sometime after June 18 when the four western premiers meet in Victoria to consolidate their position for the July conference.

Barrett spoke at two secondary schools Thursday, one here and one in Campbell River, dwelling heavily on his belief that students should become more involved in politics.

"Everything is political, all power lies with political parties," he said here. "And," he added, "power is really where it's at."

The premier asked the students here if they had ever thought of campaigning for school board candidates to "push for the kind of education you want."

From the blank stares he received, it was apparent the students had given the matter little thought.

"If you really want something done in the world around you, get involved," the premier told them.

Barrett repeated his political message later in Campbell River.

The school was the centre of controversy for several years because of the radical policies of its former principal John Young. However, none of the students questioned Mr. Barrett about Young, whose dismissal last year by the school board was upheld after a board of reference inquiry.

Revolt Brews In Ontario Over 7% Tax

Special to The Times

TORONTO — A public revolt is brewing across Ontario over the imposition this week of a new seven-per-cent provincial sales tax.

The constitutionality of the new tax which came into effect at midnight Tuesday without the legislative seal of Parliament, is being seriously questioned.

In Ottawa and a number of other major Ontario cities, consumers have been refusing to pay the additional two-per-cent tax on principle and vendors have been told to report them to the provincial sales tax department.

The provincial New Democratic Party, claiming that taxation without legislation is morally wrong and illegal, says it may take the Conservative Ontario government to court over the issue.

The party says the government has no authority to collect the two-per-cent additional sales tax and should refund to consumers the $4 million it has already collected illegally.

NDP Leader Stephen Lewis said his party is considering seeking a Supreme Court writ to force the province to stop collecting the new sales tax until after legislation amending the Retail Sales Tax Act is passed.

Treasurer John White has been defending the governments right to retroactively pass that legislation, at the same time criticizing strongly opposition filibustering which has held up the legislation's passage through the house.

He said the flim-flam and clap-trap used by opposition members to hold up that amending legislation in the house was childish and absurd.

The treasurer contrasted his government's actions in retroactively passing legislation to that of the federal government when it took from a few days to 17 months to pass modifications to the Income Tax Act.

When Pontiac introduced Astre we told you it was right on.

It looks like a lot of you agree!

In fact, it looks like Pontiac Astre is the kind of car a lot of you were waiting for. In its first few months, Pontiac Astre is already outselling some other small cars that have been around for years. The reasons are easy to find. Astre is unusually roomy for a small car. It's a responsive, easy-handling car. It offers many important features that you won't find in the top selling import models, like a double-panel acoustic roof, a fail-safe fuel pump and a big 2300 cc engine. And Astre is built right here in Canada.

There's the Astre Coupe, the Astre Hatchback (a coupe that virtually transforms into a wagon simply by flipping down the rear seat) and the Astre Safari station wagon that's available with very attractive woodgrain panelling. 8 CARD OF THANKS

The gratitude in our hearts can never be fully expressed, but we want our friends, relatives and neighbors to know how much their kind words and expressions of sympathy have meant to us during our recent time of sorrow in the sad loss of our husband and father, Rupert A. S. (Ray) Walker. — Mrs. Edith Walker, and family.

We wish to thank our many friends and the friends of our late son, Denis, for their kindness and expressions of sympathy during our recent loss following Denis' tragic death. — The Lynch Family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

ENGEL — In loving memory of Mary Katherine Engel, who passed away May 4th, 1970.
Our hearts still ache with sadness
And secret tears still flow,
What it meant to lose her,
No one will ever know.
Her thoughts were all so full of us,
She never could forget,
And so we think that where she is,
She must be watching yet.
As Angels keep their watch up there,
Please God, just let her know,
That we down here, do not forget,
We all loved and missed her so.
Each time we pass her photo
She seems to smile and say,
"Don't cry, I'm only sleeping, We'll meet again some day."
—Sadly missed and always remembered by her Husband, her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

FENN — In loving memory of my dear husband who passed away May 4th, 1972.
Nothing can ever take away
The love a heart holds dear
Fond memories linger every day
Remembrance keeps you near.
—Sadly missed and loved always by his Wife, Winnie and Family.

GIBSON — In loving memory of Mrs. Isabella Gibson, who passed away May 4th, 1965.
To hear her voice, to see her smile
To sit and talk with her awhile
To be together in the same old way,
Would be our dearest wish today.
—Sadly missed and remembered always by, Nancy, George, Bella and Families.

GIBSON — In loving memory of mother, Isabella Gibson, who passed away May 4, 1965.
—Always remembered, George, Kate and family.

From a Crook to Civic Leader

I have just read a fascinating story called Metamorphosis of a Criminal — the true life-story of Ed Edwards, a man who spent much of his life in criminal activities — robbing banks, as a con man, holding up stores.

Oftentimes, Edwards was caught, and he spent 14 years of his life in various jails. Eventually he found his name on the FBI's list of the 10 most-wanted criminals.

Ed's troubles started when he was a baby; he was an illegitimate child born in 1933 to a young woman who was jailed soon after his birth because she had stolen $100 from an employer. When she was released, she committed suicide, leaving her child to be raised by foster parents.

His foster mother died when he was seven and he was sent to an orphanage, and immediately fell into disfavor with a nun who punished him severely because he wet the bed.

As he grew older, his activities in crime became more and more sophisticated. When he was 15 he was accused of vandalism, and sent to reform school, where he gained an education in crime. He writes, "I learned what burglar's tools were, how to hot-wire a car so that no keys were needed to start it, how to pick locks, and how to forge cheques. I learned how to avoid being caught by the police by setting off a false alarm away from the scene of the crime. I was all set to tackle the world. Some day people would hear of Ed Edwards, master criminal."

The next years Ed spent in a life of crime, holding up stores and banks, getting caught and going to jail, escaping or being released, and returning to his criminal activities, until finally he was sent to Leavenworth and met a guard who so changed Ed's thinking and the direction of his life that today he is a fine citizen, married to a loving, understanding woman, and the father of three children. He spends his time lecturing to young people and to men in prisons, hoping to inspire them to go straight and to change their lives as he changed his life.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc. for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call.

Law Reform Reaction Negative

TORONTO (CP) — Much of the public reaction to the Law Reform Commission of Canada's study papers on law reform is negative, a commission official said Wednesday.

Referring to the commission's paper on Canada's obscenity laws, Dr. Hans Mohr told about 100 members of the Elizabeth Fry Society that some people think the commission is "out to destroy the morality of this country."

Public reaction to a study paper which recommends that statements taken from an accused by police for use in court be taken before an independent official, has also been negative.

During a discussion period that followed the Society's annual meeting, Dr. Mohr praised the recent Bail Reform Act as a piece of "progressive, liberal legislation," but said it seems to have backfired.

"It has come to the point where the sentences being given tend to compensate for parole and that's why we have a rise in population in federal institutions," Dr. Mohr said.

LANSDOWNE STUDENTS will present The Servant of Two Masters at the opening of the Greater Victoria Schools Drama Festival tonight at 7:30 at Lansdowne Junior Secondary. Jamie Donaldson, left, and Jon Madill rehearse a scene from the play.

REGINA (CP) — Jeff Kolberg, a split receiver from Oregon State, has signed with Saskatchewan Roughriders of the Western Football Conference.

Cutbacks Won't Be Fought

North Cowichan Mayor Gerald Smith says his council has decided not to oppose the application by the Canadian Pacific Railway to close stations in Parksville, Nanaimo and Chemainus.

He said he held discussions with the train agents affected and they favored the cutbacks on the grounds the service would be streamlined.

The CPR is applying to reduce the number of train agents on the Esquimalt and Nanaimo line from nine to two. The other seven would be guaranteed jobs elsewhere by the CPR.

Smith said he earlier opposed the application because he was concerned that freight service would be reduced out of Chemainus. However, he said the CPR has assured him there would be no reduction of the service.

He said he might join other mayors in using the public hearings on the cutbacks as an opportunity to induce the CPR to spend more money advertising their passenger service on the Island.

However, the application to cut back the number of agents on the line would not be opposed by the municipality.

Grant for Slab Study

OTTAWA (CP) — The International Development Research Centre, a government agency, will give Ghana $67,270 to study the manufacture of wooden building slabs, it was announced Thursday.

The grant will help finance research on the slabs made of wood-wool-excelsior-and mineral binder such as cement, magnesite or gypsum.

The aim is to develop a cheap building product suitable for tropical climates and made from materials available in West Africa.

The grant to the Forest Products Research Institute in Ghana will be augmented by $29,330 from the Ghanaian government.

83 BOLTED BURGERS BEAT OLD RECORD

KINGSTON, R.I. (AP) — Robert Materne certainly isn't boycotting meat.

The 21-year-old student devoured 83 hamburgers — without buns — in a 2½-hour period Thursday night to set what was billed as a world record.

A spokesman for New England Food Management, Inc., which sponsored the hamburger-eating spree at the University of Rhode Island, said the Guinness Book of Records lists the old world hamburger-eating king as Philip Yazdizk, who put away 77 patties in 1955 in Chicago.

Materne, who ate his regular dinner before the event, said his weight jumped to 212 from 199 pounds.

Anyone energetic enough to climb Mount Finlayson — 1,342 feet — can get a lift to the park from the Cook Street office at 9 a.m. Saturday.

An informal slide show and discussion with people who have travelled in Europe will be held at the office on Wednesday, May 9.

Sex Minor Factor In Job Complaints

EDMONTON (CP) — Sex was not a factor in a majority of the complaints made by women to the Human Rights Commission about discrimination involving employment, says Labor Minister Bert Hohol.

He told the legislature 47 women registered complaints with the commission last year involving employment. There were 154 employment complaints.

"It's interesting that 35 of these females alleged that grounds other than sex—for example race, age and so on—were the cause of the employment difficulties."

Hohol also said the commission believes there will be an increase soon in the number of complaints from women alleging discrimination on the grounds of sex.

This was anticipated once the provisions of the Individual Rights Protection Act became more widely known.

He said the government is planning a "major media campaign," using mainly newspaper and television advertising, to publicize terms of the act.

Papers Urged to Avoid 'Their Own Watergate'

By WILLIAM H. JONES

WASHINGTON (WP) — Asserting that the newspaper industry cannot afford its "own version of the Watergate," Pennsylvania insurance commissioner Herbert Denenberg has called on editors and reporters to make public financial and conflict of interest statements.

Speaking to a meeting of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, Denenberg said the press should not permit itself to be vulnerable to questions by the public about potential conflicts.

"You should be the last to try to keep your operations in the dark," he said, declaring that a newspaper's first responsibility is to maintain its credibility.

Specifically, Denenberg said, editors and reporters should file statements of financial holdings with their publication, which would then make the documents available for reporting by the media at large.

In addition, editors and reporters should not serve as trustees and directors on boards that may generate conflict of interest problems, Denenberg urged, and newspapers should make public lists of annual advertising revenues on a company-by-company basis.

He called on newspapers to make more extensive checks on claims by advertisers, to print "corrective" ads and to accept counter-advertising.

Reaction to Denenberg's disclosure suggestions was mixed. Erwin Canham of the Christian Science Monitor said, "I'd have no objection." Robert White of the Mexico, Mo., Ledger noted that no other industry but newspapers has to make public annual statements of company ownership — whether publicly or privately held — under U.S. post office regulations.

Tom Pugh, associate editor of the Peoria, Ill., Journal and Star, said he opposed the idea, because financial statements "could be broadly misinterpreted and credibility damaged."

Pugh said he owned some stock in Peoria's two largest companies and had a home mortgage from the city's largest bank. "How is the public to know," he asked, that the stock was purchased mainly to make sure he received a copy of the firm's annual reports, and that the home loan was a GI Bill mortgage made 20 years ago?

But Denenberg replied that newspaper workers should require the same standards as those "which these same editors often urge on politicians." Top personnel of the three Philadelphia papers — Inquirer, Evening Bulletin and Daily News — have more power than 85 per cent of the people in Pennsylvania's government in Harrisburg, Denenberg said.

DES Substitute Found for Beef

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — Two University of Arizona researchers say they have made a discovery that could save housewives millions of dollars in predicted future beef price increases.

The researchers said they had found what appears to be a safe and effective substitute for DES, a hormone widely used to speed up the fattening of cattle.

The federal food and drug administration recently banned DES because of indications it might be connected with cancer.

Ranchers and meat industry groups, which had become dependent on the fattener, have been calling for a relaxation of the ban. They said that without the help of DES, it will take cattle much longer to put on weight to reach slaughtering size. The delay would increase feed lot costs, which would raise beef prices — already the target of national hostility — even higher, they said.

Drs. W. H. Hale and Donald Ray said they had discovered a replacement — estradiol, a natural hormone found in human beings, and apparently in all mammals.

Beef gained weight just as fast from being given estradiol as the animals did with DES, they said, and the hormone is already being manufactured in commercial quantities.

"We think it has a potential for acceptance by the FDA and the feeding industry because — unlike DES — it is a natural produce of the endocrine system in all animals," they said.

"We have been unable to discover any side effects in more than 100 test animals."

Asbestos Labelled Major Hazard

TORONTO (CP) — Construction methods permiting asbestos dust to escape, producing health hazards to both workers and general public, were criticized Wednesday by Dr. Irving J. Selikoff, a professor of community medicine at Mount Sinai School of Medicine, New York.

He pleaded with industry to accept responsibility so that "society, which needs asbestos, won't throw the baby out with the bathwater."

Dr. Selikoff told a meeting sponsored by the University of Toronto preventive medicine department and the York-Toronto Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association, that all samples of New York air now show asbestos particles.

He said asbestos fibres have been detected in the lungs of every person on whom autopsies have been conducted in the past year at the Mount Sinai school.

Dr. Selikoff said studies of asbestos workers who died prematurely showed between seven and 10 times the usual rate of deaths from lung cancer, three or four times the expected rate of deaths from stomach and intestinal cancer, a much greater likelihood of death from a rare tumor of the chest and abdomen known as mesothelioma, and a high rate of death from asbestosis not seen among non-industrial workers.

Throughout the summer, if you're a licensed driver and come into a participating Gulf station, you can come into money.
You'll receive a free Money Game card. And if you scratch off four spots (and only four spots) that add up to 7, 11 or 21, then you can win from $1.00 to $25.00.
The easiest way to scratch off the spots is to use the edge of a coin. If you scratch off spots that hide 4-leaf clovers, you can win $1,000.00.
And if you still haven't won—hang on.
Collect the cards. Because each card has a hidden lucky letter printed on the tear-off portion on the bottom.
Scratch the square spot and collect the letters.
Spell GULF and you can win $1,000.00.
Spell SERVICE and you can win one of the grand prizes of $5,000.00.
And with so many ways to win, your chances are tremendous!
So don't pass the buck—drive into Gulf, today!

Play the Money Game where you see this sign.

Come to where the good values are. Come to Gulf.

Gulf

To win prizes contestants must answer one of the skill-testing questions on the back of the Money Game card. Prizes of $1.00 and $2.00 will be paid on the spot, by the dealer. For prizes $25.00 and over, contestants will be provided with an addressed envelope by the dealer to submit their card and answer. Winners will be mailed a cheque.

The Razor's Edge (xxx), on 13 at 8. A strong cast (Tyrone Power, Gene Tierney and Clifton Webb) highlights this 1946 adaptation of Somerset Maugham's rambling novel about an ex-First World War flier who travels the world in search of spiritual harmony.

War and Peace (xxxx), on 2 and 6 at 8:30. (Part 3) The spectacular battle of Borodino (1812) dominates this segment of Tolstoy's classic.

Operation Kid Brother (xx), on 5 at 9. Italian-made James Bond-type adventure filmed in Morocco, Spain and Monaco.

The Judge and Jake Wyler (xx), on 8 at 9. Bette Davis plays a judge-turned-detective in this 1972 TV crime drama that co-stars Doug McClure as her associate.

Ballad of a Soldier (xxxx), on 9 at 9. A Russian-made hauntingly beautiful and tender story of a young soldier's attempt to get home to see his mother during a leave from the army in the Second World War. This award-winning 1960 film is honest and unspoiled by any propaganda whatever and could have been made anywhere.

Carousel (xxx), on 12 at 11. A tastefully produced 1956 movie adaptation of the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical that concerns the marriage of a swaggering carnival barker and a shy small-town young woman. An excellent cast includes Gordon MacRae and Shirley Jones.

Elmer Gantry (xxxx), on 8 at 11:30. The Sinclair Lewis novel about an unscrupulous salesman who becomes a fire-eating preacher under the tent of a lady evangelist has been brought to the screen with terrific impact. This 1960 drama is highlighted by award-winning performances by Burt Lancaster and Shirley Jones, with equally competent acting by Jean Simmons and Arthur Kennedy.

Ritual of Evil (xx), on 13 at 11:30. A psychiatrist investigates the death of a wealthy patient in this 1970 mystery-drama that stars Louis Jourdan and Anne Baxter.

The Bobo (xx), on 2 at 11:45. Peter Sellers plays a matador-turned-singer who becomes involved with Barcelona's most celebrated courtesan in this 1967 comedy that co-stars Britt Ekland.

Follow That Dream* (xx), on 4 at 11:45. Elvis Presley stars in this 1962 comedy-drama about a homesteading Florida family and the efforts to evict them.

Nightmare Alley (xxx), on 13 at 1:15. A strong 1947 drama about an ambitious carnival drifter who cheats everyone he comes in contact with starring Tyrone Power and Joan Blondell.

Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet (xxxx), on 4 at 9:30. A well-made 1940 biography of the man who discovered the first cure for syphilis and forced the medical profession to take notice of it as a disease. Edward G. Robinson is superb as the doctor and Ruth Gordon matches him every step of the way as his wife.

The Suspect (xxx), on 13 at 10.30. A well-acted suspenseful 1945 drama about a middle-aged man married to a shrew who falls in love with a younger woman and plots to do away with his wife. An excellent cast includes Charles Laughton and Ella Raines.

Valentino (xx), on 13 at noon. A romanticized version of the Valentino legend elaborately produced against a background of gaudy splendor of the early Hollywood days. Starring in this 1951 biography are Anthony Dexter, Eleanor Parker and Richard Carlson.

Ransom For a Dead Man (xxx), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. This 1971 crime-drama about a police lieutenant (Peter Falk) vs. a woman lawyer (Lee Grant) who killed her husband served as the pilot for the now successful series, Columbo.

Channel 9 Telethon a Two-Way Success

KCTS-9's first annual membership week was a two-way success. The drive achieved it's primary goal of doubling Channel 9's membership (now 10,000) and adding badly needed financial support in excess of $70,000 in pledges. It also achieved a second important aim: demonstrating the large amount of community support for public television in the Pacific Northwest.

Since pledged donations are still arriving at Channel 9, there are no exact figures on how much money will be finally received. However, the final night's pledges indicated that over 5,000 people had pledged $15 or more; doubling the number of Channel 9 members. Since KCTS had it's first fund-raising night, Oct. 1, 1972, audience response has continually grown. Each pledge night has brought in tremendous amounts of financial aid and viewer support.

For it's first annual membership week, April 1 to 8, KCTS-9 put together a unique format. The finest public domain Charlie Chaplin comedies were presented with epilogue discussions by Herb Graf, well known New York film critic. Between films and epilogues, civic personalities appeared in Channel 9 studios to discuss current issues, community activities and public television.

But, the most important thing about membership week was not activities and interviews; it was raising badly needed money for KCTS-9. The funds which Channel 9 will realize, once all pledges come in, will be used for two major purposes. First, the money will allow the station to remain on the air Saturdays and Sundays, days for which Channel 9 is not currently funded. The cost of broadcasting for a weekend amounts to about $3,500. Second, KCTS will use donated money to expedite grants which have been awarded the station, but which require matching funds to be raised in the community. As an impressive example, the HEW grant of $359,000 which will assist KCTS-9 to achieve color capability and programming flexibility requires that Channel 9 raise $119,000 locally. Viewer support will help Channel 9 become a full-time, all color, completely flexible broadcasting operation. The rich, diverse programming of Channel 9 deserves no less.

Membership week was an effective, fun-filled, entertaining and useful activity for both KCTS-9 and its viewers. The first annual membership week showed that Channel 9 can count on their viewers to support public television, and aid the station in its fund-raising work. In turn, KCTS-9 showed that, while fund-raising has become a necessary part of public television, it can be a novel as well as a practical way to raise money and memberships. Channel 9 would like to thank all who had a hand in the successful campaign.

Cannon Enjoys 'Hero' Image

By JERRY BUCK

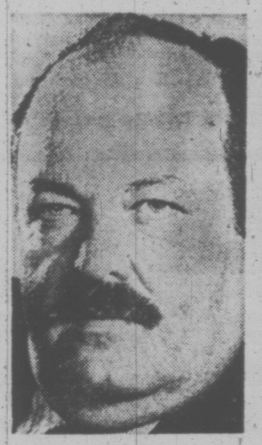

LOS ANGELES — William Conrad carries a big load on television.

Cannon is the only weekly show with just one star and no regular players to help bear the burden. It can be facetiously argued that the 260-pound Conrad more than makes up for the lack of such help.

On the CBS show, Conrad has no secretary, no pal in the police, no girl friend, no one.

"I have seen too many shows ruined by having the hero's image divided too many ways," he said. "There's not enough of the hero in any one man. But it's rough on me.

"I'm in practically every shot. "I worked from the first of June to the middle of February without a day off. When we were on location I worked Saturdays too. Our days were long — 13 hours."

WILLIAM CONRAD
. . . "Cannon"

Conrad says he isn't complaining.

"If I worked an eight-hour day, I'd feel I'd hardly worked."

But he has turned down several offers to co-star in films.

"I want to rest when the nine months are over," he said.

"And you get to the point financially where it doesn't matter."

SHOW IS HIT

Cannon, ending its second year, has been a financial success. Its high position in the ratings assures Conrad of more years of steady employment.

Conrad, 51, has given the fat man a new image.

He comes across as tough, active, and with a masculine virility only slightly layered in fat. He is an ardent fisherman and often sails his 47-foot ketch, Moonraker.

Other than radio, where he was Marshall Matt Dillon on Gunsmoke for 11 years in pre-television days, Conrad had never had a starring role.

"I played a lot of heavies and the leading man's best friend, which is the dullest part in the world," he said.

"They're beginning to broaden the viewpoint as to who can play lead roles," he added.

"You no longer have to be seven feet tall and handsome. I was delighted to see Telly Savalas signed for Cojack. And look at Buddy Ebsen in Barnaby Jones.

"The whole concept of the leading man has changed. I think it's wrong to bring up a generation believing that only beautiful people can do things. It doesn't happen that way."

Conrad actually added 25 to 30 pounds since beginning Cannon.

His role in Cannon ended a retirement from acting that lasted nearly 20 years. In the early 1950s, when radio faded, he did a few parts in television, then became a producer and director. But his voice was often on the tube. He did the voice-overs for thousands of commercials and actually earned twice as much from them as he did from producing and directing.

He also narrated such shows as Bullwinkle and The Fugitive. The association with the latter show, plus several appearances as a guest star on television, led to Cannon.

CABLE 10 HOSTS GALLERY TELETHON

The Victoria Art Gallery has the largest membership per capita of any art gallery in Canada and, in its permanent possession, the finest collection of Japanese art in the country.

However, despite some federal and municipal grants, the cost of maintenance, salaries, acquisitions and proposed expansion has pushed the galleries' budget to the limit and they are, for the first time, asking the public for financial support.

To head the fund-raising drive, the gallery is holding a six-hour telethon on Cable 10, on Friday, May 11, to raise public funds in aid of its continuing operation.

Promising to be more than just a request for help, the Gallery Lines Show (as the telethon will be called) will feature guests gleaned from Victoria's abundant artistic community together with taped segments by various local entertainers.

Many of the writers, poets, musicians, photographers and painters will be interviewed separately, but some will join in a panel to discuss the creative problems and opportunities in the communities.

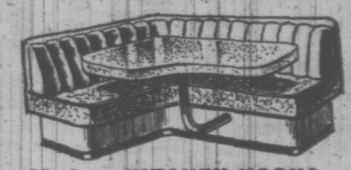

Women in the Arts will be one such panel that will include P. K. Page (Mrs. A. Irwin), noted poet and painter; Alice Munro, successful Canadian author now living in Victoria, and Dorothy Livesay, internationally-known Canadian poet and instructor at the University of Victoria.

The currently successful rock star Valdy will be featured both on tape and in panel discussion together with songwriter Gipp Foster, and singer Tom Middleton.

Photography will form the basis for another panel that will include Gray Campbell, the B.C. publisher who has just recently published a beautiful book of exquisitely photographed wildflowers, and Michael Rougier, award-winning ex-photographer of Life magazine. Slides of the book will be shown and many of Rougier's exciting experiences with Life will be discussed.

Although fund-raising is the main purpose of the telethon, the Gallery Lines Show hopes to make Victorians aware of its continuing program of musical concerts, poetry readings, drama presentations by the Gallery Players and its successful picture-loan service.

OTTAWA OFFERS CLEAN-UP FUND

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal government is willing to make available up to $20 million a year for 10 years to improve the quality of water in Georgia Strait and all tributary waters such as the Fraser River, Environment Minister Jack Davis said Thursday in an interview.

He said the money would be in the form of loans, through the provincial government, to municipalities, subject to a 25 per cent "forgiveness" clause.

Davis chided the provincial government for not availing itself of the money.

He also said that large shipments of environmentally hazardous substances eventually will be banned from the inside passage along the British Columbia coast.

He made the remark in an interview during a flying tour of Johnstone Strait islands that were smeared with bunker fuel when the freighter Irish Stardust grounded near here last winter.

Davis, who viewed the region for the first time since the incident Jan. 25, also said the government will banish vessels that exceed an as yet unspecified maximum size, irrespective of the cargo being carried.

A PERSONAL TIRADE was launched against top brass in the Republican Party and White House Thursday by Martha Mitchell when she testified in a civil suit arising out of the Watergate bugging. According to sources at the hearing, her testimony —despite earlier claims that she knew of "dirty business"—shed little new light on the case.

Hanoi Runs Risk Of New War—U.S.

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — North Vietnam must halt its aggression in Cambodia and Laos, or run the risk of precipitating a new war, both Saigon and Washington have warned Hanoi.

President Nixon, in his annual state of the world message Thursday to Congress, said unless North Vietnam lives up to the ceasefire agreement, it risks renewed war with the U.S.

His words were echoed in South Vietnam today, where a Saigon government spokesman said "if the Communists try to violate and endanger our two neighboring countries, the Republic of Vietnam will have to reconsider her policy toward implementation of the ceasefire."

Nixon also indicated the chances of improved United States relations with the Soviet Union and China are threatened by what he describes as continued aggression by North Vietnam.

He indicated American tolerance has been tested to the breaking point and Hanoi now has two choices.

"The first is to exploit the Vietnam agreement and press its objectives in Indochina. In this case it would continue to infiltrate men and material into South Vietnam, keep its forces in Laos and Cambodia and through pressure or outright attack renew its aggression against our friends."

By picking this path, Nixon stated, Hanoi "would endanger the hard-won gains for peace in Indochina. It would risk revived confrontation with us."

This was the plainest language Nixon has used in dealing with North Vietnam since the war was supposed to have ended more than three months ago.

Nixon said Hanoi still can retrieve the situation.

"The second course is for North Vietnam to pursue its objectives peacefully," he said. This would mean total observance of the Vietnam agreement, including full accounting of missing American servicemen and a removal of all North Vietnamese troops from Laos and Cambodia.

"If North Vietnam chooses the peaceful option, the United States remains committed to better relations," Nixon said. This includes the U.S. economic aid he said is essential to a lasting peace.

Meanwhile, in Saigon, Viet Cong and South Vietnamese government representatives were meeting today to try and break the deadlock on safety guarantees for ceasefire supervisors which has held up the exchange of civilian prisoners.

The two sides were understood to be looking at new procedures proposed by the Polish delegation of the International Commission of Control and Supervision which would allow the civilian releases to go ahead.

At the same time, Canada urged the ICCS to condemn the Viet Cong for a formal violation of the Vietnam truce agreement if they refuse to grant wider air corridors for observer helicopters.

The four-country commission was divided on the request, however, a Canadian spokesman said.

Apparently the Indonesian delegates are non-committal, while the Hungarians and Poles oppose such a move.

The Canadians argue that under the Paris peace agreement, freedom of movement is guaranteed.

LESLIE FROST, who was Ontario's premier for longer than any other in the 20th century, died today at the age of 77. All parties in the Ontario legislature rose to pay tribute to "Old Man Ontario" when they heard of his death. Story, Page 16.

Land Group Formed

Resources Minister Robert Williams today announced the establishment of what he termer a "small secretariat" to assist the provincial government's environment and land-use committee in all land-use, regional development and resource management decisions.

He said the secretariat will have a total staff of some 83 personnel, of whom 22 will be new appointments, and the budget for the new staff is expected to total about $400,000. The agency will be headed by a director equivalent in status and salary (about $27,000) to a deputy minister, "indicating the importance with which the government views the job of secretariat."

Advertising for key positions is expected to begin soon, and initial staffing completed this summer.

The secretariat's prime role, as explained in a lengthy press release from Williams' department, is apparently one of liaison and co-ordination, both internally between the various government departments and externally in working closely with regional districts.

The group will assist and be directly responsible to the environment and land-use committee in its role of "co-ordinating major regional development decisions on an interdepartmental basis and with the regional districts throughout the province," Williams' statement said. It will also work in conjunction with the soon-to-be-established land commission.

The cabinet committee, responsible for broad environmental and land-use policy, was established under the former Social Credit administration by an act which overrides other development and environment management legislation. It is chaired by Williams, with membership consisting of the ministers of agriculture, municipal affairs, health services, mines and highways.

"Our resources are too valuable to leave to a piecemeal process, and the experience and insight of municipalities and regional districts are too valuable to leave in their present frustration," Williams said.

Initially it will be composed of three technical groups, an inventory group, a regional planning group and a so-called "special projects" group.

The inventory group will ab-

JET HITS BARRACKS, CASUALTY TOLL HIGH

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — A U.S. A-1 Corsair jet fighter-bomber crashed into a crowded military barracks at the Phnom Penh airport tonight as Cambodian troops and their families were eating their evening meal. It burst into flames and destroyed an area half a city block square.

Heavy casualties were feared although the pilot bailed out and lived. At least two persons were known dead but it was believed the casualty toll on the ground would go higher once rescue crews have searched the burning wreckage of the plane and the buildings it set on fire. Witnesses said they saw a child's leg near the wreckage and the body of a woman at the crash scene.

Lebanon Lull In Third Truce

BEIRUT (AP) — Two days of bitter fighting between the Lebanese army and Palestine Arab guerrillas ended today with both sides holding to a new ceasefire.

Two ceasefire attempts Thursday collapsed and open street battles threatened to sweep Lebanon into full-scale civil war.

Only a few random shots were heard in the streets of this shell-torn capital today.

In southeast Lebanon, 5,000 troops of the Palestine Liberation Army were reported to have crossed the border from Syria but then withdrew to positions on the border after truce was agreed.

A defence ministry spokesman said army forces in Beirut have "withdrawn to assembling areas in compliance with the ceasefire agreement and we hope the other side will do the same."

Guerrilla jeeps with loudspeakers toured bullet-riddled Palestinian sectors of the city urging combatants to observe the ceasefire.

Beirut's international airport was reopened and commercial flights were resumed after a 12-hour closure. Traffic between Beirut and Damascus also resumed.

Premier Amin Fafez told reporters: "All signs show that conditions today are better than yesterday. Both sides are making efforts to apply the provisions of the ceasefire. Reactions of all other Arab countries were excellent."

The Kuwaiti ambassador announced that a shipment of blood plasma and medical supplies was on its way from his country.

Radio broadcasts from Cairo and Damascus, Syria's capital, carried Moslem prayers for the Sabbath urging Arabs to "spare your blood for the real holy war against the Israeli infidels who are polluting sacred Jerusalem and usurping our lands."

50% Think Nixon Liar

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Half the U.S. people believe President Nixon lied when he said on television Monday he had no knowledge of a coverup of the Watergate political espionage plot, says a Gallup Poll issued today.

Four out of 10 people interviewed in the poll also said they thought Nixon had advance knowledge of the plot.

To the question, "Do you think President Nixon has participated in a coverup of the Watergate situation?" 50 per cent of those interviewed said "yes" and 35 per cent said "no," with 15 per cent undecided.

In his speech, Nixon accepted ultimate responsibility for the plot but denied he knew anything about it.

Asked by the Gallup Poll whether they thought Nixon told the whole truth in his speech, 30 per cent said "yes" and 40 per cent said "no."

U.S. attorney general-designate Elliot Richardson, under heavy pressure from Congress, has indicated he probably will name a special independent prosecutor in the Watergate case, according to sources.

The Washington Post said today that Richardson's decision was definite, but other sources didn't go that far. They said he will make no public commitment until his nomination as attorney general is confirmed by the senate.

President Nixon, meanwhile, picked Gen. Alexander Haig today to serve as temporary chief of the White House staff while senate investigators questioned Nixon's former two top aides about the case and any cover-up of it.

Word of the president's choice of Haig, army vice-chief of staff, for the critical post came from Florida, where Nixon is spending the weekend, while H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman were submitting to a second day of testimony before separate investigators.

The two said today they were sure any suspicions of any presidential knowledge of the Watergate affair would be dispelled "when the truth is fully known."

White House sources said the 49-year-old Haig would serve on an interim basis, taking over many of the duties that Haldeman held until he resigned Monday as chief of staff.

However, Nixon does not intend to give anyone the broad powers that Haldeman wielded, sources said.

Haig was Nixon's No. 2 national security adviser until January, when he was given a promotion from two-star to four-star general by the president.

He will return to his military job after helping the president rebuild the riddled top level of the White House staff.

Haig has been one of Nixon's favorite troubleshooters. He frenquently undertook missions for the president to assess the military and political situation in Indochina.

In selecting Haig as staff chief, Nixon followed the example of President Eisenhower, who also picked an army man to head the White House staff in the wake of the resignation of Sherman Adams who was implicated in a vicuna coat scandal.

Ehrlichman and Haldeman testified for a total of seven hours before the Watergate

Nixon Includes Canada

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon has linked Canada with transatlantic opportunities this year to produce a healthy world economy and peaceful society.

Which placing emphasis on Europe in his world policy review Thursday, Nixon opened his arms in a wider embrace by saying:

"The United States, Canada and Western Europe have a decisive contribution to make to a healthy world economy and to a new peaceful international order. These are new creative tasks for our partnership."

Reviewing post-war developments among alliance members, the president dwelt briefly on the "challenges" offered as both Canada and the U.S. redefined their world position. (See also Page 10.)

"Frank reappraisals of our respective interests have brought some new problems to the force, particularly in economic relations between the two countries," he said.

Mourners at the bier of a girl they didn't know

A Dozen Strangers . . . But They Cared

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mourned by only a handful of strangers, a murdered teenage girl went to her grave Thursday with her identity still a mystery and her slayer still at large.

In her namelessness, she was mourned simply as a human being deserving of love and sympathy.

"Everyone should have flowers," said a handwritten note on a bouquet placed on her grey coffin.

The body of the girl, about 16, was discovered March 21 in undergrowth in Stanley Park by a man searching for beer bottles. Her skull had been smashed, possibly by a 25-pound rock that was lying on the chest.

Beneath the badly-decomposed body was a newspaper dated May, 1972, leading police to believe it had lain in the park for almost a year.

Rev. Olli Jokasaari began his service with the 139th psalm— "O Lord, thou hast searched me, and know me."

It was a death of puzzling questions, he said.

"Who was she? Where was she from? Why did this thing happen? The answers were not known but "she was one of us . . . and as such deserves our love and our deepest sympathy.

The dozen mourners attending the funeral chapel service — 10 women and two men — were of an age to have a teenaged daughter of their own.

Eight of the mourners travelled in the funeral procession to the grave, which like the service, was paid for by the city.

Funeral parlor staff, reporters and photographers made up the remainder of the procession.

Police said as complete a description of the girl as possible has been circulated to police throughout Canada and the United States and a chart of dental work has been distributed to dentists across Canada.

The only response was from a couple in Red Deer, Alta., whose daughter was missing. They were unable to identify the body.

Police believe the possibility of the girl ever being identified is remote. The marker on her grave will bear a two-word inscription: Unknown Female.

Drug Addiction On Increase

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — UN members reported Thursday that general drug addiction is increasing around the world, even in poor countries, but that heroin use in the United States has declined for the first time in nine years.

France also reported a fall in heroin use, but said the use of marijuana and LSD was increasing.

"In the United States," said American spokesman Harvey R. Wellman, "the rate of new addiction to heroin has registered its first decline since 1964."

He attributed this to tougher measures taken by law enforcement agencies in combatting the drug traffic, steep increases in drug seizures and to expanded treatment of addicts.

But as the social committee of the UN economic and social council opened its discussion on narcotic drugs, a report showed growing use of drugs throughout the world. The report, by the International Narcotics Control Board, said the scope of drug abuse widened and became more complex in 1972.

"The most disturbing affect," the report said, "has been the increasing resort to heroin, not only in the urban areas of industrialized countries, but also in developing countries, where it infects the younger members of the population."

However, the board reported progress in international co-operation to combat drug dealing, especially in the main production areas in The Middle East, South and Southeast Asia.

PRINCE RUPERT SUPERPORT?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Environment Canada has recommended a site near Prince Rupert for a superport development.

Two reports, one by a private Vancouver firm, and the other by the northern branch of the fisheries service, both made for Environment Canada, were released today.

Both conclude that Ridley Island, about four miles south of Prince Rupert, would be suitable.

Brisk Sales, Fewer Salesmen Cause for Real Estate Smiles

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Being a real estate salesman is not always a bed of roses. But things are looking up.

Business has seldom been so brisk, prices have never been higher. And at last the number of salesmen is levelling off.

By provincial order no new licensing courses can begin this year, effectively freezing the number of salesmen in the field.

This means 7,100 across the province, 700 of them in the Victoria area.

Discussions are under way between the government and real estate boards about possible improvements in the industry, mainly for the betterment of the salesmen.

Among the ideas under discussion are:

—Some form of salary for first-year salesmen based upon the minimum wage. The salaries would be sort of an advance against expected future commissions.

—Some permanent restrictions on the number of salesmen hired in B.C. Salesmen have criticized some firms for over-hiring, leaving many working at subsistence levels.

The freeze on licensing of new salesmen will continue for the balance of 1973 to give the provincial government and the industry time to find a permanent solution.

Those already attending courses will be licensed if they pass but no new applications are being accepted. With normal staff turnover, the few 1973 licences issued are expected to be balanced out by retirements.

While the number of salesmen is levelling off, business is growing.

Probably nowhere more so than in Victoria.

Total sales under the Multiple Listing Service in this area totalled almost $7 million during April, a 100 per cent increase over the $3.5 million last April.

This follows the trend of each month in 1972 about doubling the MLS volume of the previous year.

The Victoria Real Estate Board has expanded staff to handle the new business, hiring S. G. Eales to assist manager John Hicks. Eales will take charge of MLS listing and printing activities while Hicks supervises other board business, not the least of which is helping to organize the provincial real estate convention which opens here May 26. More than 500 delegates are expected from across B.C.

Main reason for the big increase in MLS volumes is a reduction in the commission rate for homes under $27,000.

The weekly printout of revised listings also helps the salesmen to move properties.

Total staff at the real estate board office now is 12 including Hicks, Eales, two printers and eight secretaries.

In charge of the operation is Eric Charman, recently re-elected as board chairman.

'LACK OF SUPPORT' CAUSES SASKATOON FIRM TO MOVE

SASKATOON (CP) — The operation of an air conditioning firm will be moved to Edmonton because of a "lack of support" from the Saskatchewan government, Jim Marsh said Thursday.

Marsh, vice-president in charge of production and marketing for Buffalo Package Equipment Ltd., said his firm had planned a $750,000 expansion in Saskatoon.

He said the firm waited about eight months for a reply from the provincial government on possible financial assistance in the form of a loan and then applied in Alberta.

A reply was received from Edmonton within one week and Alberta officials visited Saskatoon to discuss a possible move, Marsh said.

Mutual Funds' Role 'Assured'

WINNIPEG (CP) — Pension fund and other professional investment managers remain confident that equities will prove to be worthwhile long-term investment, R. H. Jones, president of the Investors Group, said Thursday.

He told the annual meeting mutual funds are assured of an important role in the savings and capital process because they provide the primary vehicle for the majority of individual investors to participate in the growth of the economy.

Jones said the excess of fund redemptions over sales which has characterized the industry for some time can be attributed to a variety of factors rather than any single cause.

Mutual funds enjoyed a spectacular growth rate in the 1950s and 1960s and it should not have been surprising to see a slowing down once the adjustment was completed.

"What was not foreseen, however, were the excesses of the late '60s wherein too many investors, and unfortunately too many fund managers, treated portfolios as vehicles for speculative purposes.

"This brought about a painful reaction which was superimposed on the already normal slowing down of the industry's growth.

"In addition, the relatively few but important instances of malfeasance, the resultant major and unpleasant publicity, and the exodus of large numbers of sales representatives from the industry reinforced the difficulties which have been and are being experienced in both Canada and the United States."

The total impact, he said, was worsened by the underlying trend in equity markets during the last few years. Stresses in world trading patterns and international monetary relationships, inflation, and recurring credit crises were among factors creating a trying environment for equity investment.

"On an over-all basis the rewards to the common stock buyer in North America have been inadequate and disappointing in relation to the vital role which he fulfills in the capital process.

"The resultant fallout has not been confined to mutual funds but is reflectd in the results of all whose function is associated with equity markets."

Oil Rights In Alberta Yield $100M

EDMONTON (CP) — Revenue by the Alberta government from the sale of petroleum and natural gas rights during the first quarter of 1973 was $100.7 million, compared with $73.9 million the previous year.

A report issued by the department of mines and minerals said almost $11 million was received from the sale of crown reserves in the three months ending March 31, 1973, compared with $4.2 million for the same period in 1972.

Royalties on oil, gas and gas products totalled about $69 million, compared with $51 million for the first quarter last year.

Revenue from land rentals was $20.6 million, up from $18.7 million in 1972.

The report said 79.7 million acres in the province were held under crown leases, reservations and permits for petroleum and natural gas rights as of March 31, 1973.

To Kill or Not to Kill That Magnificent Weed?

Being some selected items from a man's personal diary:

★ ★ ★

Item: Wonderful news from jolly old Britain this ayem which I made mighty sure came to my wife's attention, though whether it will resolve our annual early summer spat remains to be seen.

Ever since the dear girl took on the job of restoring an ancient, weed-filled lawn, a job she's done with absolute dedication and an expenditure of no more than $91,000, she's been absolute death on dandelions. In my assigned role as Chief Mower I have made tortured efforts, much to her displeasure, to manage the chore without slicing the top from a single dandelion.

The point I make is this: "The dandelion is one of nature's gems, a wild thing yet as bright and beautiful as any domestic bloom. I would as soon cut a carnation as a dandelion."

The point my wife makes is this: 'The dandelion is a flag showing where a weed grows. The weed must go and so must the dandelion."

So much for the impasse. Divorces have been granted on lesser grounds.

Ah, but now the wonderful news from Britain where, it seems, London's famous Kew Gardens is staging an exhibition of dandelions, a flower in danger of extinction from just such zealous, lawn-loving gardeners as my wife. Not only that, but several conservation groups have banded together in a save-the-dandelion campaign, though the people at Kew Gardens think the poor thing is doomed.

I have put the problem of cutting or not cutting to Jack Beastall, a man my wife trusts implicitly, but Jack is no help at all. Just says, "It depends entirely on how you feel about dandelions."

Item: Into the chief editorialist's office this morning, a quiet, intellectual oasis from the news room, and found the chief editorialist in a brooding mood, in keeping with a man whose job it is to comment each day on the global insanities.

It seemed likely that the chief editorialist might be in this introspective frame of mind as the result of the television appearance of President Nixon, a cornered weasel if ever there was one, but it turned out there was something more perplexing than Watergate troubling him.

Wordlessly, the chief editorialist handed over a brief news release from the Patent Office in Ottawa.

"Worried about confidential documents being photocopied without permission?" the item asked. "Then the Xerox Corporation may soon have a solution for your problems. Canadian Patent 917,701, granted to the Xerox Corporation, discloses a way of coating a document with a light-emitting material making it readable to the human eye but unreadable to a photo-copying machine."

The chief editorialist arose and gazed glumly from his window.

"What do you say when a photocopier makes a copy that can't be copied?" he asked of the world. "What do you say?"

I tip-toed away and left him to his thoughts.

Item: Reading today what seemed, at first, a routine interview with Victor Borge, the unmelancholy Dane, only to discover that it contained an inspiring philosophy.

Borge had this to say: "Life is a gift. To me every morning is a new life . . . It is to be expected that the unexpected will happen. Things change . . . I believe in defensive living. Expect the worst because that is expectable, but be deeply grateful when things go right. If you escape disappointment, be deeply grateful — but don't expect that's the way it is supposed to be . . . Laughter is as important as anything in life. With a lighter mind you don't weigh so much."

They're words that are just about perfect to begin any day.

★ ★ ★

Item: The work going badly this morning, as it has all week for no apparent reason, so I phoned the lady to pack some chicken and wine and we sneaked away to Windy Oaks, that fine beach out past Metchosin, for our first picnic of the year.

Warm sun, a cooling breeze off the open Pacific, deep blue water, fields of buttercups behind us. Who could ask for anything more?

We'd thought, at first, that we had that whole stretch of gravelled beach to ourselves, but then, far down the shore, we saw that we were sharing this clean, bright, open world. The boy and girl would be in their early twenties, I'd guess, prototypes of those youngsters we call "hippies," for want of a better word, but they frolicked as little children do, running into the water, skipping stones, wrestling, their easy laughter borne down to us on the breeze.

It was, I suppose, a kind of love dance, utterly charming and uninhibited, but it seemed to me such an expression of complete freedom that I was filled with wonder and envy.

'Spirit' Ready For Its Flight To City

By AB KENT
Times Staff

If all goes well the morning of May 19 a bright red and blue speck approaching Victoria over Juan de Fuca Strait will be the first model aircraft in North America to cross an international water boundary.

Victoria Radio Control Model Club will sponsor the flight by the "Spirit of Victoria" from Ediz Hook at Port Angeles, Wash., to Clover Point.

Barring misfortune, the plane loaded with five pounds of fuel will take off from the paved road leading to the Hook's U.S. Coast Guard station, guided by radio commands given from a 25-foot cruiser.

Looking much like the Spirit of St. Louis, flown over the Atlantic by Charles Lindberg, the four-foot model with the six-foot wingspan designed by the Victoria club will take off about 8:30 a.m. when wind and sea should be still.

★

A similar project has not been accomplished since the middle 1950s when a radio-controlled model was flown successfully over the English Channel from England to France, a distance of about 21 miles.

Juan de Fuca Strait is 18.3 miles from Ediz Hook to the Dallas Road waterfront, a route which was swum 17 years ago by Marilyn Bell.

Mac McNally, a director of the club, said the plane will need a long takeoff run because of its heavy fuel load, giving an all-up weight of about 11 pounds.

The alcohol-castor oil fuel mixture will be carried in a large fibreglass wing tank of about half-gallon capacity.

Below that will be a gravity-fed pressure tank to ensure a constant fuel-air mix, which cannot be adjusted once the plane has taken off.

The four controls altered by radio signal are aileron, elevator, rudder and throttle.

★

Flying time is expected to be about one hour at speeds ranging from 20 to 50 miles an hour, depending on water conditions affecting progress of the pilot boat.

Because the boat will not be able to approach Clover Point close enough for the pilot to see the landing place properly, a second pilot will be waiting ashore with dual radio controls.

A tricky point in the exercise will be the simultaneous switchover from one set of controls to the other, which will have to be done with auxiliary radio or by visual signal.

The Spirit of Victoria will fly within sight at all times, probably no more than 500 feet above the strait.

McNally said the club has had enough foresight to build a standby aircraft in case the first one crashes on takeoff. It is of nearly identical design with color scheme reversed.

MR. AVERAGE TO PAY $952 TAX ON HOME

If you live in Saanich . . .

If you're Mr. Average in an average $33,000 home . . .

And if that average home is in the urban part of the municipality . . .

Mr. Average will be paying $952 in taxes.

As well as setting the tax rate Thursday, Saanich also increased the charges for those living in the sewered area.

Sewer charges were increased by $11.15 to $84.30.

These charges include $63 for capital projects and $21.30 as a user charge.

Back to Jail For Young Pair

A pair of two-time escapers who admitted stealing more than $6,000 in a series of Greater Victoria housebreakings were returned to jail today by a disconcerted Judge William Ostler.

Paul Alexander Telfer, 18, was sent to Haney Correctional Institute for 18 months definite and 18 months indeterminate.

His companion in the four break-ins, 17-year-old Geoffery Anthony Green was given a one-year definite, one year indeterminate sentence.

The pair must also serve the unexpired terms prior to their escapes.

"It appears neither of you has responded, to earlier jail sentences," said Ostler, adding his hope that they would abandon criminal activity "in the fullness of time."

Green and Telfer escaped from New Haven April 15. Eleven days later the two were arrested in Oak Bay, leaving a trail of house breakins in Esquimalt and Oak Bay in which $6,180 worth of goods were stolen.

Telfer had been sentenced in Vancouver to nine months last Nov. 3 on charges of theft, break-in, possession of stolen property, failure to attend court and a driving offence.

Two weeks later he received an additional four months in Burnaby for a jail escape.

Green had been sentenced Feb. 5 in Victoria to five months definite, 6 months indeterminate for theft, break-in and possession of stolen property. He received an extra six months March 29 in Burnaby for a jail escape.

Hoadley Named Superintendent

The department of education today appointd a Saanich school principal a district superintendent of schools for a district to be named later.

N. B. Hoadley, principal of Reynolds Secondary School, was one of six educators named by the department to fill positions which will become vacant Aug. 1.

The appointments included the first woman to be appointed a district superintendent of schools. Frances Fleming is now vice-principal of Magee Secondary School in Vancouver.

City Abandons Two Mall Plans For Downtown

By ROLAND MORGAN
Times Staff

Just one year after Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen led a group on a trip to Europe to inspect traffic-free city areas, Victoria has abandoned both its tentative mall projects. There are no more plans in the works.

An ambitious scheme to close Government Street downtown was abandoned several weeks ago following the report of a Seattle traffic expert.

The plan is now to compromise . . . by widening sidewalks and reducing the street to two lanes.

Broad Street, first eyed for a mall seven years ago to connect Bastion Square, Trounce Alley and Centennial Square, is now scheduled to carry seven bus lines, as one-way routings are introduced on Johnson and Pandora.

The plan is to run more than 20 buses per hour, making quiet Broad Street into what one senior city official dispargingly termed "a service lane."

The new system is due to start June 3, a Sunday.

TURNING AREA

The bus lines, each running three buses per hour, will use Broad Street as a kind of clover leaf turning area for terminals in the downtown area.

Although no formal executive decisions had been made about the Broad Street mall proposal, the scheme had been considered in some quarters as "a natural," since it is already a mall at the south end and another four city blocks carry low traffic volumes.

When the Government Street mall proposal, pushed by Alderman Sam Bawlf, was discarded as too drastic for the city's traffic situation, planning officials and others were thinking the Broad Street mall would be an obvious alternative.

NO COMMENT

The bus re-routing, organized by city traffic engineer Dave Campbell, with B.C. Hydro bus officials, was greeted without comment at a meeting of city council's traffic committee earlier this week.

One senior city hall planner said: "It's embarrassing since there appears to have been a failure to co-ordinate the activities of two city departments which naturally pursue the needs of their specialized areas."

A traffic official said he thought the Broad Street mall proposal did not exist any more.

SAFETY patroller Mike Laitinen, 12, of 5815 West Saanich Road has been chosen to represent 54 Greater Victoria schools at the 14th national School Patrol Jamboree in Ottawa May 18 and 19. Mike, a Grade 6 student at Durrance Elementary, joins 14 other B.C. students for the trip to the capital.

Get-Away-From-It-All Vehicles Featured at the Outdoor Show

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Machines which allow you to get-away-from-it-all are now featured at the annual Outdoor Show at the Esquimalt Sports Centre.

There's a little one-seater hovercraft selling for $2,295.

For many it is a delightful vehicle which can skim over land and water and run about 130 miles on a couple of gallons of gasoline.

But for others who like isolation the craft sent shudders down their spines.

"Just think," said one observer, "if these lighter than air vehicles ever become as popular as boats and cars, there won't be an isolated wilderness beach or cove on Vancouver Island which is not within easy reach of man."

There is also a little mini-car which the makers advertise as the ideal companion for camping, fishing or hunting — "or just exploring the great outdoors and getting the tension out of your system."

It's not new but is not yet as popular as it is in eastern areas.

The rugged, little one-seater machine eliminates walking and hiking. It can be driven in high country over delicate colonies of alpine flowers, along shallow stream beds and over the forest floor.

The maker's brochure depicts one young man charging his mini-car through the underbrush, getting the tension out of his system.

There is no wildlife in sight.

It is recommended as the perfect machine for mixed safaris, rallies and group excursions.

But the outdoor show is not just an exhibition of such machines.

There is plenty to see — all types of exhibits representing all phases of outdoor living.

There is a small dinghy with a folding mast — ideal for sailing on Vancouver Island lakes. It can be fitted to a cartop rack.

There is a wide range of fast water kayaks, canoes and water cycles — light tents and back-packing equipment for those who plan wilderness holidays this summer.

The backyard enthusiast has not been forgotten. Exhibits include the newest lawn and patio furniture, barbecues, swimming pools and children's playground equipment.

The show also has a large display of folding tent trailers, trailers and motor homes. Power boats and accessories are also featured.

The promoters of the show have provided a wide variety of entertainment for visitors. Members of the Pacific Swimming School will show how to teach six-month-old babies to swim.

The popular Sun Dancers of Vancouver will perform on a trampoline.

The show closes at 7 p.m. Sunday.

OTTAWA OFFERS CLEAN-UP FUND

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal government is willing to make available up to $20 million a year for 10 years to improve the quality of water in Georgia Strait and all tributary waters such as the Fraser River, Environment Minister Jack Davis said Thursday in an interview.

He said the money would be in the form of loans, through the provincial government, to municipalities, subject to a 25 per cent "forgiveness" clause.

Davis chided the provincial government for not availing itself of the money.

He also said that large shipments of environmentally hazardous substances eventually will be banned from the inside passage along the British Columbia coast.

He made the remark in an interview during a flying tour of Johnstone Strait islands that were smeared with bunker fuel when the freighter Irish Stardust grounded near here last winter.

Davis, who viewed the region for the first time since the incident Jan. 25, also said the government will banish vessels that exceed an as yet unspecified maximum size, irrespective of the cargo being carried.

A PERSONAL TIRADE was launched against top brass in the Republican Party and White House Thursday by Martha Mitchell when she testified in a civil suit arising out of the Watergate bugging. According to sources at the hearing, her testimony —despite earlier claims that she knew of "dirty business"—shed little new light on the case.

50% Think Nixon Liar

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Half the U.S. people believe President Nixon lied when he said on television Monday he had no knowledge of a coverup of the Watergate political espionage plot, says a Gallup Poll issued today.

Four out of 10 people interviewed in the poll also said they thought Nixon had advance knowledge of the plot.

To the question, "Do you think President Nixon has participated in a coverup of the Watergate situation?" 50 per cent of those interviewed said "yes" and 35 per cent said "no," with 15 per cent undecided.

In his speech, Nixon accepted ultimate responsibility for the plot but denied he knew anything about it.

Asked by the Gallup Poll whether they thought Nixon told the whole truth in his speech, 30 per cent said "yes" and 40 per cent said "no."

U.S. attorney general-designate Elliot Richardson, under heavy pressure from Congress, has indicated he probably will name a special independent prosecutor in the Watergate case, according to sources.

The Washington Post said today that Richardson's decision was definite, but other sources didn't go that far. They said he will make no public commitment until his nomination as attorney general is confirmed by the senate.

President Nixon, meanwhile, picked Gen. Alexander Haig today to serve as temporary chief of the White House staff while senate investigators questioned Nixon's former two top aides about the case and any cover-up of it.

Word of the president's choice of Haig, army vice-chief of staff, for the critical post came from Florida, where Nixon is spending the weekend, while H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman were submitting to a second day of testimony before separate investigators.

The two said today they were sure any suspicions of any presidential knowledge of the Watergate affair would be dispelled "when the truth is fully known."

White House sources said the 49-year-old Haig would serve on an interim basis, taking over many of the duties that Haldeman held until he resigned Monday as chief of staff.

However, Nixon does not intend to give anyone the broad powers that Haldeman wielded, sources said.

Haig was Nixon's No. 2 national security adviser until January, when he was given a promotion from two-star to four-star general by the president.

He will return to his military job after helping the president rebuild the riddled top level of the White House staff.

Haig has been one of Nixon's favorite troubleshooters. He frenquently undertook missions for the president to assess the military and political situation in Indochina.

In selecting Haig as staff chief, Nixon followed the example of President Eisenhower, who also picked an army man to head the White House staff in the wake of the resignation of Sherman Adams who was implicated in a vicuna coat scandal.

Ehrlichman and Haldeman testified for a total of seven hours before the Watergate

Nixon Includes Canada

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon has linked Canada with transatlantic opportunities this year to produce a healthy world economy and peaceful society.

While placing emphasis on Europe in his world policy review Thursday, Nixon opened his arms in a wider embrace by saying:

"The United States, Canada and Western Europe have a decisive contribution to make to a healthy world economy and to a new peaceful international order. These are new creative tasks for our partnership."

Reviewing post-war developments among alliance members, the president dwelt briefly on the "challenges" offered as both Canada and the U.S. redefined their world position. (See also Page 10.)

"Frank reappraisals of our respective interests have brought some new problems to the fore, particularly in economic relations between the two countries," he said.

Hanoi Runs Risk Of New War—U.S.

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — North Vietnam must halt its aggression in Cambodia and Laos, or run the risk of precipitating a new war, both Saigon and Washington have warned Hanoi.

President Nixon, in his annual state of the world message Thursday to Congress, said unless North Vietnam lives up to the ceasefire agreement, it risks renewed war with the U.S.

His words were echoed in South Vietnam today, where a Saigon government spokesman said "if the Communists try to violate and endanger our two neighboring countries, the Republic of Vietnam will have to reconsider her policy toward implementation of the ceasefire."

Nixon also indicated the chances of improved United States relations with the Soviet Union and China are threatened by what he describes as continued aggression by North Vietnam.

He indicated American tolerance has been tested to the breaking point and Hanoi now has two choices.

"The first is to exploit the Vietnam agreement and press its objectives in Indochina. In this case it would continue to infiltrate men and material into South Vietnam, keep its forces in Laos and Cambodia and through pressure or outright attack renew its aggression against our friends."

By picking this path, Nixon stated, Hanoi "would endanger the hard-won gains for peace in Indochina. It would risk revived confrontation with us."

This was the plainest language Nixon has used in dealing with North Vietnam since the war was supposed to have ended more than three months ago.

Nixon said Hanoi still can retrieve the situation.

"The second course is for North Vietnam to pursue its objectives peacefully," he said. This would mean total observance of the Vietnam agreement, including full accounting of missing American servicemen and a removal of all North Vietnamese troops from Laos and Cambodia.

"If North Vietnam chooses the peaceful option, the United States remains committed to better relations," Nixon said. This includes the U.S. economic aid he said is essential to a lasting peace.

Meanwhile, in Saigon, Viet Cong and South Vietnamese government representatives were meeting today to try and break the deadlock on safety guarantees for ceasefire supervisors which has held up the exchange of civilian prisoners.

The two sides were understood to be looking at new procedures proposed by the Polish delegation of the International Commission of Control and Supervision which would allow the civilian releases to go ahead.

At the same time, Canada urged the ICCS to condemn the Viet Cong for a formal violation of the Vietnam truce agreement if they refuse to grant wider air corridors for observer helicopters.

The four-country commission was divided on the request, however, a Canadian spokesman said.

Apparently the Indonesian delegates are non-committal, while the Hungarians and Poles oppose such a move.

The Canadians argue that under the Paris peace agreement, freedom of movement is guaranteed.

LESLIE FROST, who was Ontario's premier for longer than any other in the 20th century, died today at the age of 77. All parties in the Ontario legislature rose to pay tribute to "Old Man Ontario" when they heard of his death. Story, Page 16.

U.S. JET CRASHES INTO HOSPITAL

PHNOM PENH (AP) — A United States A-7 Corsair plane attempting an emergency landing at Phnom Penh's Pochentong Airport overshot the runway and crashed into a Cambodian army hospital today causing an unknown number of casualties.

Witnesses at the scene said there might be as many as 30 dead and injured.

The pilot ejected seconds before the impact and suffered minor injuries, a U.S. embassy spokesman reported.

The spokesman said the aircraft crashed as a result of mechanical difficulties and was unable to say whether it had been hit by gunfire.

Lebanon Lull In Third Truce

BEIRUT (AP) — Two days of bitter fighting between the Lebanese army and Palestine Arab guerrillas ended today with both sides holding to a new ceasefire.

Two ceasefire attempts Thursday collapsed and open street battles threatened to sweep Lebanon into full-scale civil war.

Only a few random shots were heard in the streets of this shell-torn capital today.

In southeast Lebanon, 5,000 troops of the Palestine Liberation Army were reported to have crossed the border from Syria but then withdrew to positions on the border after truce was agreed.

A defence ministry spokesman said army forces in Beirut have "withdrawn to assembling areas in compliance with the ceasefire agreement and we hope the other side will do the same."

Guerrilla jeeps with loudspeakers toured bullet-riddled Palestinian sectors of the city urging combatants to observe the ceasefire.

Beirut's international airport was reopened and commercial flights were resumed after a 12-hour closure. Traffic between Beirut and Damascus also resumed.

Premier Amin Fafez told reporters: "All signs show that conditions today are better than yesterday. Both sides are making efforts to apply the provisions of the ceasefire. Reactions of all other Arab countries were excellent."

The Kuwaiti ambassador announced that a shipment of blood plasma and medical supplies was on its way from his country.

Radio broadcasts from Cairo and Damascus, Syria's capital, carried Moslem prayers for the Sabbath urging Arabs to "spare your blood for the real holy war against the Israeli infidels who are polluting sacred Jerusalem and usurping our lands."

Land Group Formed

Resources Minister Robert Williams today announced the establishment of what he termed a "small secretariat" to assist the provincial government's environment and land-use committee in all land-use, regional development and resource management decisions.

He said the secretariat will have a total staff of some 83 personnel, of whom 22 will be new appointments, and the budget for the new staff is expected to total about $400,000. The agency will be headed by a director equivalent in status and salary (about $27,000) to a deputy minister, "indicating the importance with which the government views the job of secretariat."

Advertising for key positions is expected to begin soon, and initial staffing completed this summer.

The secretariat's prime role, as explained in a lengthy press release from Williams' department, is apparently one of liaison and co-ordination, both internally between the various government departments and externally in working closely with regional districts.

The group will assist and be directly responsible to the environment and land-use committee in its role of "co-ordinating major regional development decisions on an inter-departmental basis and with the regional districts throughout the province," Williams' statement said. It will also work in conjunction with the soon-to-be-established land commission.

The cabinet committee, responsible for broad environmental and land-use policy, was established under the former Social Credit administration by an act which overrides other development and environment management legislation. It is chaired by Williams, with membership consisting of the ministers of agriculture, municipal affairs, health services, mines and highways.

"Our resources are too valuable to leave to a piecemeal process, and the experience and insight of municipalities and regional districts are too valuable to leave in their present frustration," Williams said.

Initially it will be composed of three technical groups, an inventory group, a regional planning group and a so-called "special projects" group.

The inventory group will ab-

Drug Addiction On Increase

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — UN members reported Thursday that general drug addiction is increasing around the world, even in poor countries, but that heroin use in the United States has declined for the first time in nine years.

France also reported a fall in heroin use, but said the use of marijuana and LSD was increasing.

"In the United States," said American spokesman Harvey R. Wellman, "the rate of new addiction to heroin has registered its first decline since 1964."

He attributed this to tougher measures taken by law enforcement agencies in combatting the drug traffic, steep increases in drug seizures and to expanded treatment of addicts.

But as the social committee of the UN economic and social council opened its discussion on narcotic drugs, a report showed growing use of drugs throughout the world. The report, by the International Narcotics Control Board, said the scope of drug abuse widened and became more complex in 1972.

"The most disturbing effect," the report said, "has been the increasing resort to heroin, not only in the urban areas of industrialized countries, but also in developing countries, where it infects the younger members of the population."

However, the board reported progress in international co-operation to combat drug dealing, especially in the main production areas in The Middle East, South and Southeast Asia.

PRINCE RUPERT SUPERPORT?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Environment Canada has recommended a site near Prince Rupert for a superport development.

Two reports, one by a private Vancouver firm, and the other by the northern branch of the fisheries service, both made for Environment Canada, were released today.

Both conclude that Ridley Island, about four miles south of Prince Rupert, would be suitable.

Mourners at the bier of a girl they didn't know

A Dozen Strangers . . . But They Cared

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mourned by only a handful of strangers, a murdered teenage girl went to her grave Thursday with her identity still a mystery and her slayer still at large.

In her namelessness, she was mourned simply as a human being deserving of love and sympathy.

"Everyone should have flowers," said a handwritten note on a bouquet placed on her grey coffin.

The body of the girl, about 16, was discovered March 21 in undergrowth in Stanley Park by a man searching for beer bottles. Her skull had been smashed, possibly by a 25-pound rock that was lying on the chest.

Beneath the badly-decomposed body was a newspaper dated May, 1972, leading police to believe it had lain in the park for almost a year.

Rev. Olli Jokasaari began his service with the 139th psalm— "O Lord, thou hast searched me, and know me."

It was a death of puzzling questions, he said.

"Who was she? Where was she from? Why did this thing happen? The answers were not known but "she was one of us . . . and as such deserves our love and our deepest sympathy.

The dozen mourners attending the funeral chapel service — 10 women and two men — were of an age to have a teenaged daughter of their own.

Eight of the mourners travelled in the funeral procession to the grave, which like the service, was paid for by the city.

Funeral parlor staff, reporters and photographers made up the remainder of the procession.

Police said as complete a description of the girl as possible has been circulated to police throughout Canada and the United States and a chart of dental work has been distributed to dentists across Canada.

The only response was from a couple in Red Deer, Alta., whose daughter was missing. They were unable to identify the body.

Police believe the possibility of the girl ever being identified is remote. The marker on her grave will bear a two-word inscription: "Unknown Female."
